CREEP FEED CALVES MAKE FAST GAINS

Beef bred calves running with their mothers will make faster gains if fed chop, according to the experience of the Dominion Experimental Station at Melfort, Sask. This can be done with a minimum of labour by building an enclosure with a small entrance which the calves can go through but prevents the older animals from entering. A rain proof box for storing a supply of chop and a trough should be placed in the creep. Some of the chop can be put in the trough from time to time as required, care being exercised to see that the grain does not ferment.

In order to encourage the youngsters to enter the creep, a salt box should be placed near its entrance. By so doing, the cattle will spend considerable time at the salt and before long the calves will find their way into the enclosure. Grain scattered along the ground leading to the entrance will tempt them to go in sooner than otherwise. Calves cared for in this manner will scarcely miss their mothers when weaning time arrives in the fall.

Laval on the Move

In Paris the treason trial of aged Marshal Petain continued as efforts were resumed to apprehend Pierre Laval, former Vichy government chief, from Spain where he took refuge after Germany's collapse. Laval was reported to have surrendered to American authorities in Germany. French airfields were told to be on the lookout for a plane carrying Laval after reports were received that the collaborationist leader had arrived at Bologna, northern Italy. Laval, who has already been condemned to death in absentia by a French provincial court, is scheduled to go on trial before August 8th.

Across the Channel, John E. Amery 33, son of L. S. Amery, former British secretary of state for India, was committed for trial in London on high treason charges after courts heard testimony that he had tried to persuade British prisoners of war and civilian internees in France to fight for Hitler against Russia. Two internees testified Amery had visited their camp and offered them freedom if they would don German uniforms to fight the Russians. Amery was quoted as saying he was working for a committee in England and that 1,500 men had already joined the "Legion of St. George" from prisoner of war camps in Germany.

Observers in Potsdam predicted the latest Big Three conference would end by Thursday at the latest and it was announced that President Truman will fly to Portsmouth, England, that day to meet King George aboard the British battle cruiser Renown. The president, accompanied by Secretary of State Byrnes and Admiral Leahy, will have luncheon with the King. King George will be accompanied by Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States; Sir Alan Lascelles, private secretary to the King, and Capt. Sir Harold Campbell. Queen Elizabeth will not accompany the King.

Sir Harold Alexander Governor General For Canada

Appointment of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, one of the front-rank architects of victory in Europe, as Governor-General of Canada, put an end to speculation in Ottawa as to who the new appointee would be. The name of Winston Churchill, former Prime Minister of England, was the latest added to a list which included those of Lt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner to the United Kingdom; Gen. Crerar, commander of the 1st Canadian Army; Viscount Cranborne, former Dominion Secretary and the Duke of Windsor. As Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean theatre, the 53-year-old General planned the mighty co-ordinated blows that shattered Axis power in that area. Gen. Alexander was the last Allied soldier to leave the beaches of Dunkerque when the British Expeditionary Force evacuated the French port at the end of the Battle of France. The Empire's youngest Field Marshal, Sir Harold is the son of the fourth Earl of Caledon. He was born in County Tyrone, Northern Ireland, and educated at Harrow and Sandhurst before beginning his military career with the Irish Guards.

Canadian Chicks Fly to Mexico

One hundred baby chicks are to be flown to Mexico. These chicks, selected from approved flocks, have been ordered from an Ontario hatchery for delivery to Mexico for breeding purposes. Their buyer has also ordered 30 R.O.P. pullets and six R.O.P. cockerels each of Barred Rocks, White Leghorns and New Hampshires. This breeding stock, aged from 12 to 14 weeks, will be shipped by express. The Director of Agriculture, St. John's, Newfoundland, has recently ordered 100 R.O.P. White Leghorn pullets and 12 R.O.P. cockerels from Canada. The birds were selected from the flock of a breeder in the Province of Quebec. The Dominion Department of Agriculture which arranged for the purchase and shipment of these chicks is also making arrangements to obtain for Newfoundland an additional consignment of 80 New Hampshire pullets and 12 cockerels and an equal number of Barred Rocks. This breeding stock, all of R.O.P. and aged 12 to 14 weeks is being ordered from breeders in New Brunswick.

HEN'S FEATHERS

Feathers in poultry is Nature's insulation plan. They keep the fowl warm in winter and cool in summer. Available evidence indicates that the cause of premature loss of feathers in laying and breeding poultry is mainly nutritional. Fast feathering is inherent and fundamental to efficient growth in healthy and properly fed flocks. Grass and oats in any suitable form appear to be a preventative of premature moulting.

Australia Grows Own Drug Supply

Successful Production of Opium Raises Problem of Control

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—The swift expansion in the growth of the opium poppy plant in New South Wales has enabled Australia to supply her own demands for morphine, but it has also brought dangers which are causing some concern to State officials.

Strict supervision of production is being carried out by the police and agricultural department, but there are fears of an opium traffic after the war which might prove difficult to stamp out. Commonwealth officials, however, do not anticipate such a development.

Fears entertained by the State officials have been heightened by the headiness with which the poppy is growing and by the ease with which the drug can be extracted. The main danger lies in illicit growing.

Realizing the dangers of the opium poppy, every Australian state declared it a noxious weed before the war. At that time a supervisory commission of the League of Nations was struggling with measures to control the growth of the poppy in different countries, particularly in the Middle East, and it was also trying to help China to root the plant out of her national life.

This commission has since issued a warning that the end of the war will probably see an illicit drug traffic far greater than anything known before.

War Production

When the war came Australia had to find her own morphine. The industry was developed after experiments by the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, co-operating with state agricultural departments and became an important part of Australia's war effort. Special machinery, modified from the wheat header, was built to gather the crop.

A number of farmers are now growing the plant under contract at $45 ($160) a ton, cartage paid from the farm. D. M. Shand, chairman of the Morphine Industry Committee, says that more farmers have been invited to become growers, and he suggests that it is possible to grow $250,000 ($800,000) worth of morphine a year.

Prominent officials read into this an intention to continue the industry after the war. They know that farmers can grow the poppy only under permit, and that the police have received special instructions.

But they do not believe that the controls go far enough. They point to the experience of other countries wherever there had been an attempt to control or root out the plant.

W. D. Albright Goes On Superannuation

After over 30 years' association with the Dominion Experimental Farms, W. D. Albright, superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Station at Beaverlodge, Alberta has retired on superannuation. For many years he has been one of the outstanding officials in the Peace River district, and from his extensive knowledge of agriculture in Northern Canada has made many valuable contributions towards agricultural progress in Northern Alberta and the Northwest Territories, over which he has traveled widely, including voyages on the Mackenzie River to the Arctic Ocean.

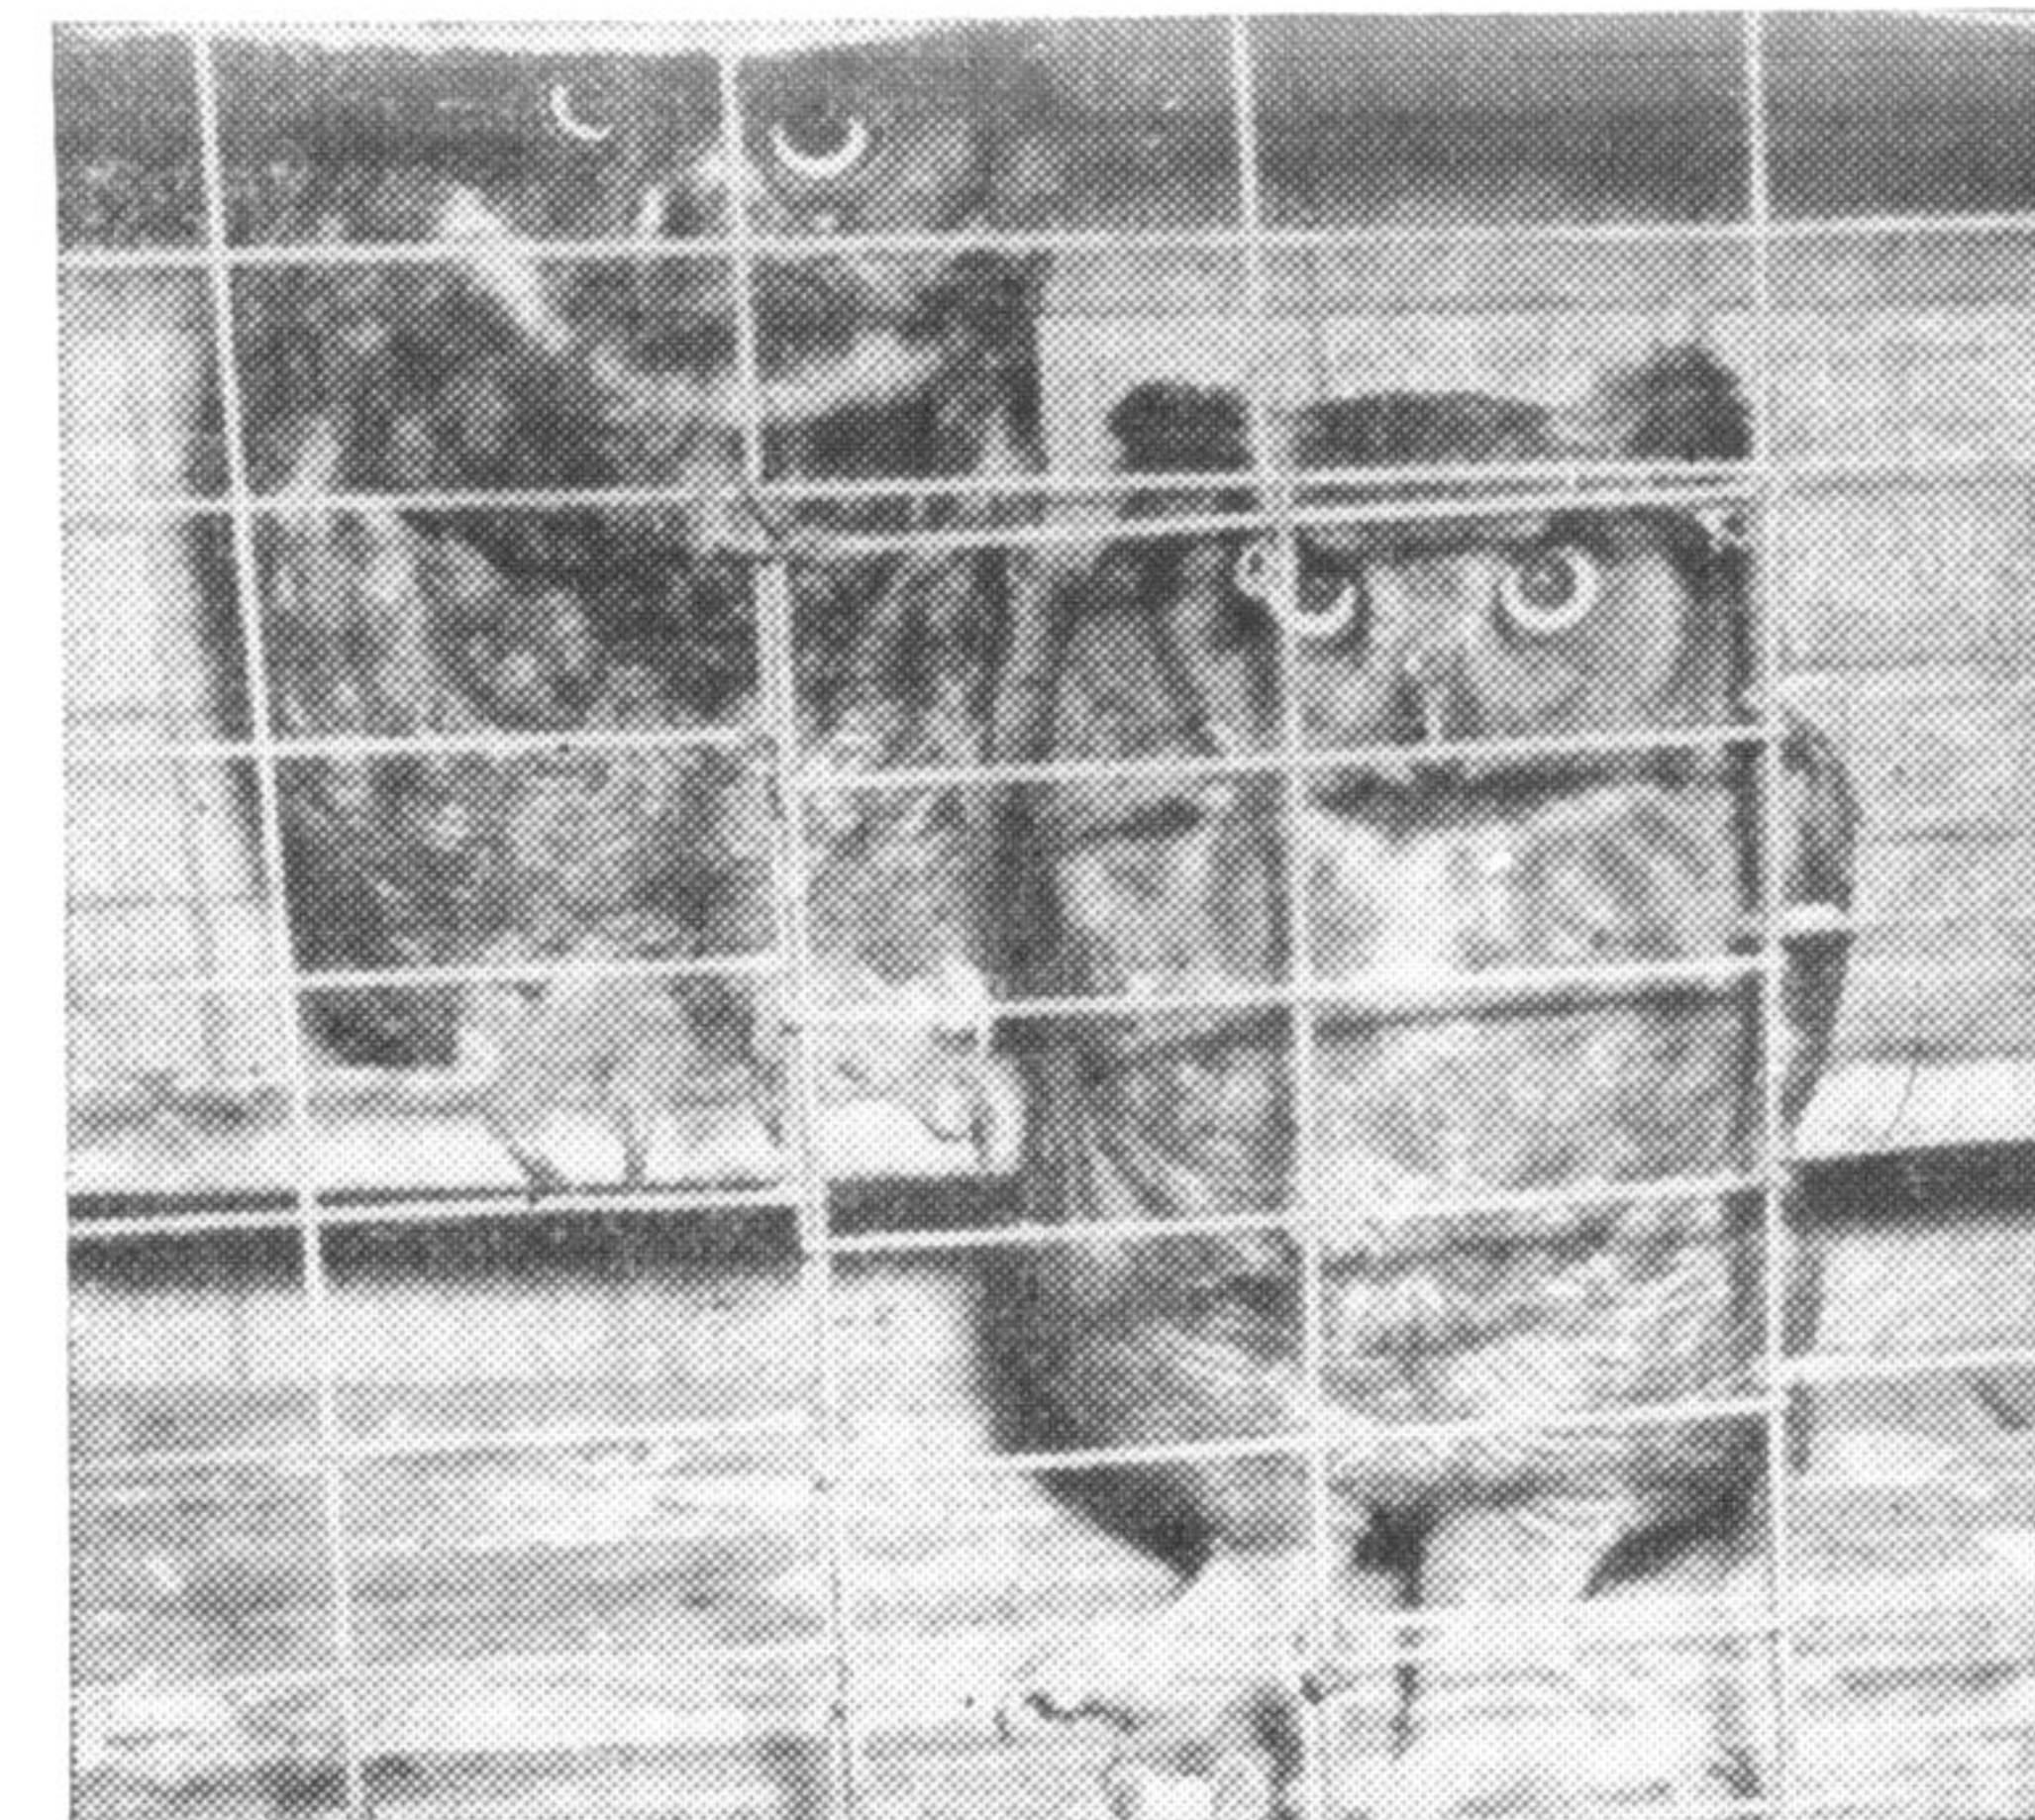

He was born in South Cayuga, Ontario, in 1881. At the Ontario Agricultural College he won the Governor General's prize for general efficiency. After leaving O.A.C. he was appointed assistant editor of the "Maritime Farmer" at Sussex, N.B., and two years later became associate editor of the "Farmer's Advocate" at London, Ontario, where he remained for over eight years.

In the early part of this century, he went pioneering with his wife and child in the Upper Peace River Region at Beaverlodge, eventually establishing a progressive frontier farm there. His farm attracted the attention of Dr. J. H. Grisdale, then director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, with the result that a Dominion Experimental Sub-Station at Mr. Albright's superintendant. So successful was the Sub-Station through Mr. Albright's experimental and other agricultural work that Beaverlodge was made a station, with an enlarged staff and throughout the years with an expanding program.

SOME WORK FOR ALL

A community might be compared to an army or a detachment of soldiers, in which there is some duty for all to perform. If some portion of the force neglect their duty, the morale of the force is lowered and it is more difficult to accomplish its aims. The first thing for everyone to do is to put energy and thought and planning into his own work. If everyone's work is well and thoroughly done the business of the town is done in an attractive and efficient way, and people are attracted to come to the town that does things in such a satisfactory manner. In some homes the job for some to do is to clean up disorder. The result is to improve the street and neighborhood. There is a job for a great number of people in maintaining the organizations of the home town.

HOO-O-DUNNIT?

The Toronto Park Zoo did it when it was recently responsible for the conversion of a Canadian Pacific Express car into a veritable Noah's Ark to accommodate a shipment of live bear, beaver, deer, opossum, raccoon, squirrel, marmot, turtle, alligator, vulture, fox, heron, bittern, de-odorized skunk, and, of course, the quizzical owls seen above. The consignment of former "Torontonians" left that city recently for Vancouver, B.C., en route to Sydney Zoo, Australia.
