Down Instead of Up

The news for which Canadians waited eagerly came from Hon. Mr. Ilsley on Friday evening and apparently had some pleasant surprises for most everyone. A glance over the main items indicates that everyone will gain by the various items proposed. Looking at it from a group or individual standpoint, it may lack some desirable features, but viewing the budget of last Friday from a general overall viewpoint it is fair to all and about all that could be hoped for in a period of two months from the close of hostilities.

No one likes to pay taxes. It is an expenditure for which the return is not always visible—at least not as visible as a washing machine, or piece of new factory equipment. Most of the folks who pay taxes in Canada have not seen the havoc to visualize the need for replacement, and the expenditure that was made in the feverish all-out effort to win the war and bring peace to the world at the earliest possible moment. It was an expenditure with which our savings could not keep pace.

At last we have a peacetime budget. Instead of taxes going up and up they have started on the downward trend. It brings with it the first rays of sunshine in a financial way and an opportunity to buy more Victory Bonds.

Returning to Peacetime Production

Household goods for which Canadians have been waiting since the early years of the war, are in production again and finding their way to dealers in a steadily increasing trickle. But manufacturers estimate it will be at least another six months before anything like normal shopping conditions return.

Estimates of production rate by various manufacturers indicate that most plants are turning out appliances in quantities running anywhere from 40% to 60% of the "pre-restriction" volume. Most company officials, however, took pains to point out that this did not mean the same percentage of plant capacity. Plant expansion and improved efficiency will put many firms in position to turn out considerably larger quantities of goods when they reach full production than they ever did before the war.

Electric ranges, washing machines and radios appear to be leading the production parade, with such comparatively simple items as irons, toasters and hot plates also in good supply. Electric refrigerators lag behind, with "a few" expected about Christmas time, but most manufacturers suggest the production picture has considerably improved in the last two months and look forward to a pre-restriction production rate by the middle of 1946.

Labor's Choice

In an article which appeared Labor Day in the Montreal Star, William G. Jaeger, who for the past five years has been working to create teamwork in American industry through the program of Moral Re-Armament, said:

"Which way will labor swing the world? In its hands now lies not only its own destiny, but the destiny of nations and empires. Labor represents the ordinary man, and the ordinary man is the world's millions. To-day the ordinary man has to decide between two opposing ideas. He can choose to be governed by a cheap materialistic ideology which puts him at the mercy of his own desire for power and prestige, so that he becomes an easy tool in the hands of whatever unscrupulous forces are aiming to control him. Or he can find a great moral force which enables him to take a stand for what is right rather than who is right at every point of decision."

This choice was illustrated recently when a Canadian shipyard was closing down. One gang was asked to work overtime. $18.00 extra in the weekly pay envelope looked good to Harry, one of the workers, but he refused on the principle that if all workers united on the issue, there would be enough jobs to go around. The ordinary man has to sacrifice for the sake of another man's livelihood.

Mr. Jaeger continues:

"The best in labor and management united on a program of teamwork in industry, can out-think and out-match any materialistic ideology. Labor's task in this generation is to lead nations. In labor's hands lies the decision of whether we will abandon the ideals of justice and fair play and the brotherhood of man, for a temporary gaining of power. Or whether labor will demand from its leadership and its rank and file the moral standards—where a sound and happy home life is the background of every country; where honest teamwork in industry is the permanent answer to class warfare; and where unity comes from hearts that are free from the tyranny of bitterness, ambition and fear. Labor united on this program can unite any nation. Labor led by God can lead the world."

Builders of the Future

University corridors echo this autumn to the strong, steady tread of Canada's sons back from the war. For many it means the return to studies and memories that kept them firm and purposeful during years in the services.

The Dominion drew immense strength from her universities. Thousands of this year's crop of male students and many co-eds wear the general service button or are attending classes in uniform while awaiting discharge. They are back preparing themselves to give of another strength in the bloodless battle of the future.

The problems these young people face in their return to college life are of prime importance to the whole of Canada because their future success is as important as the battles they won. It is not an exaggeration to say that the last 25 years might have been different had not Canada lost the cream of a generation in the First Great War. The comparatively light losses of the war just ended are encouraging if this line of thought is followed. But, unless returned students, and indeed the whole of the great body of returned men and women, can solve the problems of civilian life, the country will have suffered a blow equally as tragic.

One of the hardest of the immediate problems facing the soldier-student is the necessity for steady, unexciting plodding that must be done to force brains which are out of practice to absorb the flood of facts presented at every lecture. This will not be easy after years of training in the art of war and the easy camaraderie of life in the forces. The urge to take life easy will be hard to overcome.

For the student back from the war success is important—it's imperative. Canada and the world will be making ever increasing demands on this generation to which they even now owe so much. A high level of education is as much a part of this country's wealth as her rich ore bodies and vast timber tracts. This form of wealth will become more and more valuable as peacetime activities expand. Canada must have this wealth as she must have her physical resources if she is to build on the position she has attained in the march to victory.

Labor Breaks a Company

In a 5-4 decision the Supreme Court recently ruled that a union can refuse to sell its labor to a company if it so chooses, even to the extent of forcing an employer out of business.

The case arose out of an unusual transport strike. The company, boycotted by the union, was forced to close down permanently. It charged that the union's action violated the antitrust law, sued for damages, but lost in the final court. Like a recent packers strike in this country, wages and hours had nothing to do with the dispute, the union simply refused to supply labor.

While some unusual and bitter circumstances were connected with the American case, the precedent established has apparently staggering implications. Tremendous authority is handed over to union officials, who, if they wished, and for the most trivial reason, might break any employer, causing staggering losses to shareholders and untold hardship to the public. Any business which might wish to install more efficient machinery to meet competition or eventually widen markets, could be halted; in fact the whole future of ordinary business in the United States is threatened by the decision of the Supreme Court.—Financial Post.

EDITORIAL NOTES

No nation is victorious that has no answer to its own problems.

Someone is liable to come along any day now and remind us that its only so many shopping days until Christmas.

Patriotism in war is to give so that the nation may live. Patriotism in peace is to give and live that the nation may fulfill its destiny.

There's a pleased look on most of the hockey and skating fans in the assurance that the arena will be available for use this year. Appreciation can be shown by the fans in the loyal support of the facilities and events provided there during the season.

Folks who think the autumn tints are not in the usual good coloring this year need only to drive the highway between Acton and Milton. Trouble this autumn is that there have not been enough bright days to get best views of the autumn glories.

BRITAIN TO DEVELOP BIG TOURIST TRADE

LONDON (CP)—The Travel Association of Great Britain and Ireland is planning to attract up to 3,000,000 tourists a year to the British Isles, but tourist facilities are not expected to be available until 1947.

The Association estimates that the visitors would spend some £100,000,000 in much-needed foreign currency and government assistance has been promised in financing the plan.

First visitors on a large scale are likely to be Swiss factory workers, who are eager to come to England as soon as conditions permit.

A special section of the Association is dealing with the ways of attracting Allied and Dominion servicemen who have been stationed here to make return visits. A plan to keep in touch with these men is being prepared.

BACK PAY $11,000

CALGARY (CP) — Ft. Lt. Doug. Wilson returned from three years in a German prison camp to find his back pay and gratuity totalled $11,000. He will take a science course at the University of Alberta and build himself a home.
