TOYS STILL SCARCE FOR BRITISH TOYS

LONDON (CP) — Children, whose wartime toys have led them to believe they were in Santa Claus' bad books, hope for better things this Christmas but prospects for such improvement are not bright.

Toy quotas have been increased and there should be more dolls, toy soldiers and other "hard" toys in the stores this year, but material is still scarce and the end of Lend-Lease has affected the situation. Plastic toys are being manufactured too but only 10 per cent. are for the home market. The remainder are for the export trade.
