AS DEAD AS THE DODO

The dodo has almost become a myth or a symbol. But there was a bird of that name—a large flightless relative of the pigeons, which inhabited the island of Mauritius until 1690. At that time it became totally extinct, due to the attacks of hogs which had been introduced into the island by Europeans. In the Royal Ontario Museum there is a skeleton and portrait of the dodo in view. The latter, painted by Dr. L. S. Russell is based on the work of a 17th century artist who had seen the dodo in life.

USE NEW SYSTEM TO PACK APPLES

PENTICTON, B. C. (CP) — A new system of packing apples, similar to the manner in which eggs are packed in cartons for retail, is being tried out by British Columbia Tree Fruits, Limited. More than 20,000 containers have been used for this season.

These first shipments have been sent to all parts of Canada, shipped under normal conditions.

The new method is named the Friday Pack, named after its inventor, Paul Friday of Portland, Ore. Each apple is nested just as an egg is nested in its container. A corrugated carton is used. Wooden posts in each corner take the weight when the carton is stacked.

The inventor claims the new system eliminates contact bruising, speeds packing, requires no protective paper wrapping and makes inspection easy. Water-proofed, specially oil-treated trays check scald and other storage diseases and permit more rapid cooling of fruit in cold storage.

The new containers used for the experiment were made in the United States, but if it proves successful they can be manufactured economically in Canada. Several millions have been used in the United States and good results have been reported.

LIFE OF THE HOME TOWN

People can well ask themselves if they are getting all they could and should out of the life of their home town. One of the principal things to be done in getting the best which the home town life has to offer, is to be a regular reader and subscriber to the home town newspaper. If you read that sheet you know about all the activities and doings of the home town. You find out what benefits and advantages are available, and then can see what you have to do to share these advantages.

When there are public meetings, entertainments, or events, the home paper tells you all about them. The home paper describes in detail the work done by local organizations, and this publicity is a great aid to all public movements.
