FARM ELECTRICITY

Only 16.1 per cent. of Canadian farms is served with electricity. The percentage varies from a high of 35 per cent. in Ontario to a low of 0.21 per cent. in Saskatchewan. Ontario consumes 79.75 per cent. of the power used on Canadian farms. These figures, states the Agricultural Institute Review, indicate that there is great scope for further development and application of electric power to Canadian farms.
