A GRIM RECORD

How goes the battle against traffic accidents? Figures from the Department of Highways show that 734 people were killed on the streets and highways of Ontario in 1947 and more than 13,000 were injured! That is a casualty list which should make all of us do some sober thinking. These grim records should impress upon everybody the need for being always alert and careful—to keep out of the 1948 statistics.

He who postpones practising the Golden Rule until others practise it towards him, becomes incapable of practising it at all.

By ROSS PEAREN

Spring in the air . . . ? A young man's thoughts turn to love . . . and maybe fishing . . . Even now many young fellows in breeches may be seen hauling home a catch of suckers from the Sixteen.

Thoughts of others turn to the great out-doors, where they may spend a quiet day fishing, hunting, golfing and tennis. Others interest centre around that great American game . . . ball.

Even now plans are being formulated by officials of the local ball club, for their summer activities. Although plans are being considered, members of the club have failed to attend a meeting called by officials on two different occasions.

The first meeting vanished into thin air . . . when a quorum failed to show up. Later at the second meeting a goodly number of interested parties were present and discussed items of interest. And by the time this hits the streets the annual meeting will have been held. It has been called for Monday night.

Rumors circulating have it, several of the juvenile ball aggregation are anxious to advance into higher junior company. While it is the ambition of every player in the game, to step into better company . . . one must ponder . . . we'll be there soon enough.

We admire the ambition of any player . . . and wish him every success when he ventures into higher company . . . but again the more experience a player has in the company of his age limits . . . the better player when he is forced to make the jump.

So, it is our conviction, the gang who brought the championship to the County Town a year ago . . . were runner's-up the year before that . . . would be well advised to continue in the same juvenile company for another year.

Informants say we will lose three players this year, who will be out of the juvenile age limit. Well, did the club not lose three players the year previous? With that handicap, the lads went through to win the championship. They can do it again.

By reading this far in the column, Editor Biehn, of the Georgetown Herald, will have concluded that 'Ravin' Ross has slipped back to earth, (after a spell in the clouds) and has come out of the coma.

Let's not disappoint him, as we wish to extend our appreciation and thanks, for his publication of over two columns from 'The Champion, under the heading of 'Trash and Dross by 'Ravin' Ross'.

We are also pleased to note the editor's fairness in presenting both sides of the argument, although it is against his better judgment. Under the caption reads: "in answer to numerous requests and much against our better judgment, we are reprinting sport columns from the Milton Champion, to show what County Towners are exposed to. The only reason we do this is because our office copy is worn out passing it around to those who couldn't believe the County Paper would stoop so low."

Wonder how he was able to salvage it long enough to set up the lengthy document? Or maybe we should charge him space rates.

Then in an editorial, Ravin Ross is mentioned further, "Our hopes that Ravin Ross would come out of his coma in the next issue of the Champion were ill-founded and another blast came from the County Town in last week's Champion. The whole sad story of those nasty Georgetown men who wouldn't believe the nice old Milton people is just too touching. But we are at a loss to know why R. R. thinks police tactics are so terrible. "When in Rome . . . as the saying goes . . . Wonder if brother Dills will be looking for a new sports reporter come next fall?"

It appears that 'the feudin' will be carried well on into the summer, long after the hockey season closes . . . But it has not closed yet . . . for the Georgetown fans . . . And in this instance we'll hand orchids to the Georgetown players . . . as long as they are in there fighting to bring the silver to the old county . . . we have gumption enough to wish them every success, even if it is impossible to convert the editor of their local paper.

There are going to be big doin's in the old town on April 21st. A big dance in honor of the Milton Intermediate 'A' Hockey team is being sponsored by the 4'teen Club at the Town Hall. Members of the team are to be invited and it should be one of the outstanding events of the season.

OAKVILLE

Thanks to the generous response of the people of Oakville and the district to the appeal for funds, the financial campaign recently concluded by the Oakville and District Red Cross Society has been a tremendous success with the quota of $4,000 more than doubled.

One of the most important industrial developments in Oakville's history took place on Monday when the great new plant of the Canadian General Electric Co., Ltd. started operations. This one-storey building located on the Queen Elizabeth Highway east of the Seventh Line, was erected at a cost of close to a million dollars and was started a year ago or more.—Record-Star.

SYMPATHETIC PUBLIC

One advantage in public vs. private ownership is that when public ownership fails in its duty to its customers, the howl from the customers is neither so long nor so loud as if a privately-owned company had failed.

Interruptions in the power and light service in Ontario are the result of miscalculations of post-war demand several years ago. The shortage in Ontario, where the Hydro is almost 100 per cent. monopoly, is worse than anywhere else on this continent.—The Printed Word.

Chemists Warn On Use Of Spray

Weed specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture are warning amateur gardeners about the practice of spraying the ground with 2,4-D in order to get rid of weed seed that may be lying there from the previous year.

Such spraying will leave the ground toxic to all seed that falls on it, they point out, and that includes the garden seed to be planted. Use of this weed killer should only be made after expert instruction or close attention to directions.

Spraying the ground now might mean that it would grow little garden stuff for three or four months, which would mean no garden for this summer.

2, 4-D is a wonderful friend of the gardener's if used properly, the specialists claim, but it can also be an enemy if used indiscriminately and without care by one who doesn't understand its action on plants. It kills weeds by stimulating their growth so rapidly that the weed uses all its energy in growth and consequently dies.

A weed, they say, is merely a plant out of place. In an effort to eradicate the undesirable plants in a garden with 2,4-D, the amateur gardener might easily ruin his garden and months of work by indiscriminate use of the chemical.
