IN MEMORIAM

AUGER—In loving memory of a dear brother and uncle Rfm. Arthur George Auger who was killed on active service in France Sept. 4th, 1944.

Four years have passed since that sad day. When one we loved was called away. God took him home—it was His will.

Within our hearts he liveth still. Always remembered by Harry, Marguerite and Boys

AUGER—In loving memory of our dear son-in-law Rifleman Arthur George Auger who was killed in active service while serving in France Sept. 4th, 1944.

Four years have passed since that sad day. When the one we loved was taken away.

Too far away for sight or speech. But not too far for our thoughts to reach. We have only your memory dear Art. To remember our whole life through. But its sweetness will linger forever.

As we treasure the image of you. Sadly missed but always remembered by Mum & Dad Wilson and family.

AUGER—In loving memory of our dear son and brother Arthur G. Auger killed in France, Sept. 4th, 1944.

Dear Arthur in sorrow and sadness. We think of the days gone by. When we were 'altogether. No sorrow clouded our sky. But now our circle is broken. We daily miss you more.

And long for that glad morning. To clasp your hand as of yore. For who can say the grief is lessened.

Though the smiles may hide the tears. Memories keep the wound still open. As the days pass into years.

Sadly missed and Brother Charlie. Mum, Dad and Brother Charlie.

AUGER — In loving memory of my dearly beloved husband Arthur George Auger, who gave his life in France Sept. 4, 1944, while serving with the Queens Own Rifles.

I hope soon in the beautiful spring time I'll stand by a narrow grave. And see within a dear, dear face I would have given my life to save.

But I know my thoughts cannot waken. That soul in the silent clay. So I'll lay down my heart beside him.

And silently wonder away. I'll wait my dear for you always. And pray that one day soon. We'll meet again in that far off land.

Our happiness to resume. Sadly missed and always remembered by Your wife Laurnette.

Danger! Watch Out For Children!

It's back-to-school time — the most dangerous and deadly time of the year for Ontario's children. In the steadily increasing traffic on streets and highways, this is the period of greatest danger.

Last September, more children were killed and injured by motor cars in Ontario than in any other month. Always, at this time of the year, the number of tragic child accidents in traffic begins to soar. But this is as needless as many of the accidents were needless which killed 132 children, and injured 2,000 others in Ontario last year.

The provincial traffic safety campaign, sponsored by the Department of Highways, and now supported by the press, radio, and many official and public agencies, shows clear evidence of success in reducing traffic accidents generally. But where children are concerned, teaching the rules of traffic safety and giving parental advice is not enough. All the safety measures and laws we can devise will never relieve the motorist of his responsibility. Many of the accidents involving children are no doubt the children's fault, legally; but that does not relieve the motorist of moral blame. The onus is always on the motorist to look out for children. Only the motorist's personal caution and driving care can lessen the toll.

While driving, every motorist should arm himself with these personal admonitions and cautions:

- 1. I'll consider every child I see on the street as a human danger signal.
2. In school zones or residential areas, I'll slow down, I'll come to the alert.
3. Wherever I suspect children may be playing, I'll drive with extra care.
4. I'll keep clear of bicycles. The youthful riders may know the rules, but even when they violate them I must watch out for them.
5. I'll be particularly careful when I see children on roller skates, with a ball, with tricycles, scooters or coaster wagons.

Select Colour of Hedge Carefully

Hedges should be to a garden what walls and partitions are to a house, says R. W. Oliver, Assistant, Ornamental Horticulture, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. They should give privacy from without and act as a background to the brighter displays of the garden from within.

The height, colour and texture of a hedge will be governed largely by the size of the property and type of garden which the hedge surrounds. A large garden needs a taller hedge than a small garden. A tall or medium hedge should under ordinary circumstances be mid or dark green in colour as its purpose is to act as a background to the garden. A golden, grey or red leaved hedge kills the appearance of any plants in the foreground.

Low hedges or borders, which are used only to give emphasis to the design by extending the architectural lines in plan on the property, may be of brighter shades particularly in formal work or in conjunction with light coloured buildings.

The texture or details of a hedge is largely a matter of coarse and fine foliage and the degree of shininess. Large leaves and shiny ones are seen in more detail than small or dull green ones. Consequently they have the appearance of being nearer at hand and the tendency to reduce the apparent size of the space they surround. A hedge of fine texture and dull green colour such as Caragana would, on the other hand, increase the apparent size.

U.S. MAY BUY ARMS FROM US

The United States may place orders with Canadian munition plants, says The Financial Post. This it seems as one of the results of U. S. Defense Secretary Forrestal's visit to Ottawa. States the Post: "We've a stockpile of arms sufficient for our own immediate needs and we've a surplus which we feel could be usefully diverted to the Western Europe trouble spot. Ottawa feels it should be diverted. It feels, too, we should keep up our war potential in the factories."

"What we'd like from the United States is an agreement which would ensure that our factories are kept humming on an economic basis. In other words, will the U. S. finance arms supplies to Western Europe from our factories? A figure of between $200 millions and $250 millions is mentioned in this regard—obviously a sizeable help to our dollar situation."

Don't Fence Me In

By Joseph Lister Rutledge
A lot of people are either approving or bewailing the leftish tinge apparent in the thinking of youth. Yet it is doubtful if there is ground for approval or reason for bewailing. The young collegiate and college student is not so much championing a cause, as he is following a patent. He is rebellious in the face of forces whose imitations he can see but cannot remedy. He is as yet untouched by the rude business of living. He is still under the leadership of idealists, whose idealism is not shaped and modified by the immediate and pressing competitive battle for survival. So youth becomes the natural hope of the leftish propagandists. It is also their surest check. Youth is their hope because of its quick acceptance of new and virtually untried doctrines, for that is the way of youth. It is their check because its real faith is represented better in what it does with its time, effort, and enthusiasm, when it freely determines its own course for its own ends.

A young girl wins the applause of a world for her skating skill and, in the rinks of Timmins, Winnipeg, and Toronto, boys and girls go seriously about the business of producing another and better Barbara Ann Scott. Alone, or under the eyes of a teacher, they spend long hours practicing their figure eights. They are paying the price of achievement, the price of their own conviction that they can advance beyond the crowd. In remote construction camps husky and more or less erudite young men are swinging a pick by day and teaching in the Frontier College by night. Why? To fit themselves or their schools into a set pattern? Who would believe that? It is to make a new pattern, and to help these new Canadians do the same. In the mines, in the forest, in surveyors' gangs, in the cook-house or the resort or the farm; in a thousand occupations as varied as the localities and the circumstances in which they are found, youths are working hard and long to earn the money to provide the education that will enable them to be better men than the next, in their chosen work. Maybe they will come back, bronzed and tough-handed, once again to vote against free enterprise. So what! That is just lip service. In their acts there is no evidence of a belief in a creed that would fence them in. On the fighting line youth asks, not for security, but for its own chance.

CHILDREN AND THE FUTURE

The children of to-day will be the men and women of a future time not very far distant. On them will rest in time the burdens of their home countries and communities. They need to be strong and well to do their work and support the families that most of them will have. They need education and the chance for the development of their powers. On them will rest some day the duty and opportunity of deciding the policies that their country shall follow.
