by Kay Dee

Here is a letter I received last week.

Civilian Defence Committee, Queen's Park, Toronto, Ontario

Under the direction of the Civilian Defence Program, we are entering into rather extensive planning to organize both civilian and industrial corps, for the purpose of firefighting in the event that the danger of air raids should become imminent.

As an outstanding citizen whose loyalty to our government is unquestioned, we believe we may count on you as a patriotic citizen for complete co-operation. We have, therefore, taken the liberty of appointing you Air Raid Warden for your street.

Enclosed you will find a list of necessary equipment necessary for each Air Raid Warden. May we suggest that all possible haste be exercised in making preparations for this emergency.

Thank you for your courtesy in this matter, and please accept the thanks of the Committee for your part in this enterprise which we feel is so vital to the best interest of all of us.

Yours very truly,
 (A name I couldn't make out)
 Air Raid Warden Division

List of Necessary Equipment for All Air Raid Wardens:

1. One respirator.
2. One axe carried in belt.
3. One stirrup pump to be carried over left shoulder.
4. One extension ladder to be carried over right shoulder.
5. One long-handled shovel to be carried under left arm.
6. One scoop to be carried in left hand.
7. One rake to be carried under right arm.
8. One whistle hanging from lanyard to be carried in mouth.
9. Two wet blankets slung around neck.
10. One belt worn around the waist with ten hooks for carrying six sand-filled bags and four pails of water.
11. One flashlight carried around neck for easy access.
12. One tin helmet with brim up to carry extra water.
13. One box matches to light incendiary bombs that fail to light.
14. Extra sand to be carried in available pockets.
15. One ship's anchor to be dropped in case warden cannot stop.

The signature was a most deliberate scribble... we haven't bought our respirator or lanyard or stirrup pumps or anything yet, because we don't expect anybody to come to check up on our emergency equipment!

Saturday night we were out for dinner in Toronto and watched from the garden of our hostess a group of lawn bowlers enjoying a friendly game at the Runnymede Lawn Bowling Club, just over the back hedge. Our hostess's father had a familiar looking partner, and we learned he was Thomas Richard Henry.

"Oh, introduce me!" I said. "I've got a story to tell him for his column." He writes for the Tely. So we watched and waited for an opportunity for I hoped he would exchange stories and tell me one I could tell you. But the game ended and T. R. Henry headed for the clubhouse with our friend and all the rest.

Later we were shown a tiny pair of socks that the six-foot friend of ours had won. We laughed at first, but were surprised to see that the socks were nylon, and stretch away out and will fit anybody. Friend was given the prize for not winning a single game all evening; I didn't hear if the popular columnist was similarly honored.

I missed my introduction and story—the best I can do is tell you readers the story I would have told Thomas Richard Henry if he had looked a bit more willing to have his game of bowls interrupted.

I heard one lady from Chicago phoned the CBLT station in Toronto during the Coronation television program and asked, "Who is the actress who is playing the Queen?"

Poet's Corner

SPRING'S ARRIVAL by Mary Ellen Varley

Oh, Spring has come with dancing steps
 Through the sunshine and the rain
 With daffodils and violets blue
 Bursting from the earth again!

Spring has come with a winsome breeze
 To kiss tender leaves once more,
 All land clear-washed, while one can hear
 Bird-song through the kitchen door.

Oh winter tired and weary folk
 Let the snows of sorrow go,
 Come out and look where Nature calls,
 And taste of its overflow.

HIT HOME

The dignified old lady shook hands with the pastor after the services. "Wonderful sermon!" she exclaimed. "Everything you said applies to somebody or other I know."

Hello Homemakers! A shower for a bride is a special kind of party. You see, it is a part of that aura of romance, good wishes, gifts, flowers and trousseau that surrounds her wedding — that treasury of memories she will cherish all her life. The party can be quiet and simple but we try and add a touch of novelty.

As the hostess, you set the time after making the date with the bride on some pretext. Decide on the number of guests, all friends of the bride and the theme. Plan for the presentation of the gifts and for refreshments.

Garden Shower: For the bride who will have a garden, appropriate gifts will help her develop a "green thumb." Two girls may be the purchasing agents for the group and buy seeds, gardening gloves, tools and gardening books.

Linen Shower: For quality and lasting loveliness, linens are as welcome as ever. Present the gifts on a decorated clothes rack.

Laundry Shower: Use an indoor clothes line as a gift and on it peg pressing cloth, a peg bag, starch, bag of soap and maybe a note as to ironing board and iron gift.

Condiment Shower: Select sauces, seasonings, spices, relishes, a mustard jar, mayonnaise dish and relish dishes. Wrap them separately and put them in one large box. Label this boldly with such witticisms as "Sauce for the goose" or "spice of life."

Kitchen Shower: Turn a table into an old-fashioned brick oven. Cover the sides to the floor with brick-designed crepe paper. Cover the table top with black paper on which stove plates can be sketched by tracing plates with chalk. Make a stove pipe by covering plumb boxes with black paper. Arrange the gifts on the top of this stove—frying pan, tea kettle, saucepan, double boiler with egg lifter, ladle, slotted spoon in the utensils. You may also include a set of modern oven ware dishes.

Cupboard Shower: The gifts would be such items as skirt hangers, shoe trees, blanket cases, clothes covers, hat boxes and trouser hangers (since there's going to be a man in her life). The presentation will be the most amusing feature of this shower. The clothes closet may be filled as typical Fibber McGee's closet and have rolled cotton packages fall out with a card and name of item to be donated.

then after reading the cards, the unwrapped items may be brought in on trays.

Here are other suggestions you might like to try out: hobby showers, shower of glassware on shelves which may be constructed using bricks and boards, cosmetic shower using a bridesmaid as a model, picnic accessory shower and a recipe shower with a list of staple supplies to be delivered 10 days after wedding date. And finally, one thought the bride will bless you for—do provide her with some kind of hamper to carry her gifts home.

Sandwich Loaf
 1 loaf unsliced bread
 Butter, slightly softened for spreading

3/4 cup cottage cheese
 1/2 cup devilled ham spread
 1/2 cup egg salad
 1/2 cup tuna fish salad
 3/4 cup cottage cheese (cheese mixed with chopped cress)

3 pkgs. cream cheese
 1/4 to 1/2 cup milk
 Red coloring

Trim all crusts from bread; cut loaf into six lengthwise slices. Spread first slice with butter, then with cottage cheese. Spread next slice with butter. Place buttered slice down on top of first slice. Repeat this procedure using devilled ham in the second layer, egg salad in the third, tuna fish salad in the fourth and cottage cheese in the last. Soften cream cheese with a spoon. Add milk and coloring gradually, blending until soft and easy to spread. Frost loaf with cheese.

Chill thoroughly in electric refrigerator—several hours is possible. Garnish the loaf with lettuce, radish roses and carrot curls. Cut in half inch slices with a very sharp knife. If desired, use alternate slices of whole wheat and white bread. Other fillings may be used. Yield: 12 to 15 slices.

TAKE A TIP
 1. Sandwiches may be made in advance, provided you can wrap each lot in heavy wax paper and place in crimping pan or pliable plastic container, then store in refrigerator.

2. Freshen sandwiches by placing a steaming hot cloth over them.
 3. One large sandwich loaf cuts into 60 or 65 slices and the small one into 20 slices.
 4. One large loaf requires half pound butter and three-quarters pound filling.

HERE'S WHY YOU GET Greater Windrow Capacity WITH THE NEW HOLLAND Forage Harvester

Now — a new forage pick-up for all models of the New Holland Forage Harvester!

Here are good reasons for New Holland's high capacity. In the two pictures at the right, see how the revolutionary floating upper apron keeps constant control of hay. It's an exclusive New Holland feature!

New Holland's Harvester is engineered to handle up to 18 tons of grass silage, 20 tons of corn silage, or 6 tons of dry hay per hour. Its four-knife fly-wheel slices down and in for better cutting action. Knives are easily removed for sharpening without readjustment. Feeder action can be stopped, started or reversed from the tractor seat.

Control of lighter windrows that follow. Rear of apron opens and wad passes easily into big 112-square-inch opening. Crawley-type apron is synchronized with lower track to maintain constant feed control.
