HUGE 1½ STOREY HOME was moved slowly along Main Street one day last week to a new location at the corner of Pearl and Fulton Streets. Owned by Milton Motor Sales, it was shifted from its position at the corner of Main and Prince Streets by a house-moving firm, and took an afternoon to re-locate three blocks away. Traffic had to be detoured, tree limbs cut off, hydro and telephone wires moved and even a few light standards had to be shifted to make way for the movers.

Check Men's Closets For Ideas for Presents

Best way to go about gifting a man at Christmas is to start out by asking yourself a number of pertinent questions about the man himself.

What are his hobbies? What sports does he enjoy (either actively or spectator wise)? Does he like to make things of wood, metal or leather? Does he collect anything from stamps to records? Does he do a lot of travelling? Is he a sports car enthusiast or boatman, an "outdoor chef" or camera fan? Does he smoke a pipe, cigars, cigarettes? Is he a garden devotee? Does he like to read, and if so, what? What are his tastes and needs in the way of wearing apparel?

Fit Gift to Man

Armed with the answers to questions like these, you can set forth to shop with confidence in your ability to "fit the gift to the man" in a manner sure to be warmly rewarded by his appreciation come Christmas morning.

"Give a man a gift he can wear" is always good advice, so you might first turn your thoughts to your man's wardrobe needs.

Sportswear, especially, is rich in gifting possibilities because it includes such a wide variety of items that can add pleasure to a man's off-the-job hours.

Sweaters are perennial favorites at Christmas, and this year the big bulky yarns, often cable stitched, are in the fashion spotlight.

In outercoats, the fingertip length suburban coat is a top favorite for weekend wear and especially for automobile travelling. It appears in solid color fleeces and meltons, tweeds, plaids and fancy woollens.

Sport Slacks

Few men have all the slacks they'd like to mix or match with their favorite sports coat. Hence, a pair of the new "Ivy" type with slim legs and back buckle in flannel, covert or sharkskin is a pretty safe bet for gifting the average man.

Sports shirts are another "natural". This year you can choose from a wide variety of stripes, plaids, checks and solids to suit any taste from the daring to the conservative. Collars are mostly "Ivy" button down and one-piece continental.

A really "super" gift on which the whole family might well get together is one of the handsome new sports coats in tweeds, shetland, donegal or herringbone.

For your man's "loaf life", consider a luxurious dressing robe or several pairs of the new pyjamas that double so handsomely as "loungers". The new shirt-jackets are another good idea for his hours of ease-at-home.

On the dress-up side, consider shirts (what man ever has got too many?), neckties, socks, gloves, hat, shoes, mufflers, handkerchiefs, tie-bar and cuff-link sets. Choose with an eye to his tastes, and you're pretty sure to ring the

Leather Gifts Please All Men

There's something luxurious and unmistakably masculine about good leather that appeals strongly to most men. This makes well-chosen gifts of leather especially appropriate for a man's Christmas.

Starting with a man's pocket, there's a wide array of smooth and richly-textured leather wallets, pocket secretaries and key containers, many of which are available in matched sets; also tobacco pouches and leather-encased lighters.

If he does any travelling, leather luggage offers a wealth of gift suggestions, ranging from an overnight bag to a capacious two-suitcase for longer jaunts. For his toiletries there are compact leather kits, waterproof-lined, that zip open or closed.

For his desk-top at home or office there are individual items and matched sets in leather.

To carry his business papers there are sleek leather brief cases, either envelope-type or with handles, as well as the popular attached cases.

With cheery wishes for a happy holiday season, we greet all our good friends and customers and extend our heartfelt thanks for the opportunity of serving such wonderful people. A very Merry Christmas to one and all!
