Canada's Castles Serve Useful Purposes

By Joan MacLean
In Ontario Hydro New Castles-in-Spain may be built on dreams, but castles in Canada are constructed on more substantial foundations. And for a nation which has made little use of castles for military defence, Canada has a surprising number of them. Most famous, perhaps, is Toronto's Casa Loma, Sir Henry Pellatt's idea of a dream home.

When 16-year-old Henry entered his father's brokerage firm, he had four ambitions: to break the North American one-mile running record; to become a millionaire; to command the Queen's Own Rifles Regiment which he had recently joined as a private; and to build his own castle.

Made His Goal
Two years later, in 1875, he won the North American one-mile running championship although he didn't break the record. At 30 he was a millionaire. He was Officer-in-Command of the Queen's Own Rifles Regiment from 1901 to 1921. And in 1913 he moved into his 98-room castle.

Blueprints for the castle were drawn up by E. J. Lennox in 1911 from hundreds of sketches Sir Henry had made on trips to Europe. As a result, although the castle is French baronic in theme, certain towers and wings betray Scottish, English, Italian and Rhenish origins.

The building itself, not counting the furnishings, cost $3,500,000. It's valued today at $15,000,000.

Sir Henry combined the usual castle features—towers, dungeons, sliding panels and secret staircases—with the trappings of modern comfort, represented by 30 bathrooms, 52 telephones, elevators, an immense swimming pool, an indoor rifle range, three bowling alleys and a thermostatically controlled steam heating plant.

Odd Floors
The Great Hall, 80 by 80 feet, has a floor of eight inch oak planks laid in parquet style. The floor of the 60 by 70 foot dining room is in herringbone pattern. The 200 foot long main corridor, a copy of Windsor Castle's Peacock Walk, has alternate planks, two and a half inches thick, of Burmese teak and mahogany, held by mahogany pegs and dovetails and laid over an 18 inch concrete base.

A Canadian theme prevails in the marble lined observatory. The south wall has a horizontal grain representing the Atlantic Ocean and the north wall a vertical grain representing the Rockies.

Large enough to accommodate 100,000 books, the library boasted the finest indirect lighting system on the North American continent when Casa Loma was built. Sir Henry, incidentally, organized the Toronto Electric Light Company, and was initially responsible for bringing electricity from Niagara Falls to Toronto.

Underground Passage
Connected to the castle by an 800 foot underground passage are the stables and carriage house. Stalls, built of Spanish mahogany with floors herringboned to protect the horses' hooves, are now used to display several antique automobiles. Ushers were Etalo Gaeton and Kenneth Campbell.

The matron of honor and bridesmaids wore necklaces and earrings which were the gift of the bride, and the flower girl wore a ring, also a bride's gift. The best man and ushers wore tie clips and cuff links given them by the groom.

Milton Reception
The noon reception was held for 100 guests at the agricultural hall in Milton. Mrs. V. Jacobs, sister of the bride, received for her in a royal blue velvet dress with silver accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother assisted in a dusty rose lace dress with matching accessories and a pink rose corsage.

For a motor trip to Northern Ontario, the bride wore a fur trimmed brown suit with green accessories and a yellow rose corsage. They will live in Milton Heights.

Many Guests
Guests present came from Toronto, Hamilton, Listowel, Guelph, Oakville, Owen Sound, Acton, Milton, Milton Heights and Campbellville.

The bride is the daughter of Isaac Hilson and late Mrs. Hilson of Milton Heights, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. Rigo also of Milton Heights.

A white brocaded gown trimmed with seed pearls at the V neckline and on the full length sleeves, was chosen by the bride. The bouffant floor length skirt had three bows from the back of the waist. Her fingertip veil was held by a pearl and sequin heart-shaped headpiece and she wore a tear drop pearl necklace and earrings. Red roses and stephanotis completed her ensemble.

Mrs. Barbara Zanatta of Milton was matron of honor and Mrs. Rosy Shannon, sister of the groom from Milton and Mrs. Dawn Moreau of Acton were bridesmaids. All wore street length gowns of emerald green shot taffeta with matching accessories and carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. Flower girl was Nancy Scisizzi, niece of the groom, in a lime green taffeta dress, carrying a bouquet of yellow poms.

Plumbers' Equipment
Plumbers' furnace and lead pot; quantity of plumbers' nipples and washers etc.; chrome sink and basin waste etc.; plumbers' test plugs, 3 in. and 4 in.; assortment of brass fittings; electric extension cords; 5 gal. gas can and many other small articles found around the home or in a handyman's collection.

1957 by James Ross, who lives there with his family. "Mackintosh Castle" in Kingston is just a large house. Donald Mackintosh of Glasgow laid its foundations in 1853 and Joseph Doyle completed it four years later.

First Castle
Canada's first castle, built at Quebec on a precipice overlooking the St. Lawrence River, was the residence of New France's second governor. All that remains of the original Chateau Frontenac is the Malta Stone, allegedly saved from an early Jesuit priory on Malta. Today, on the same site, is the commercial castle with the same name.
