

Donna Allison, Robert McMullen Jr. Married in Kilbride Church on Oct. 1

The Rev. W. Wilkinson officiated over the double ring wedding ceremony at Kilbride United Church on Saturday afternoon, October 1, 1960, when Donna Eileen Allison of Kilbride became the bride of Robert John McMullen Jr., Milton Heights. Candelabra and standards of pink and white chrysanthemums decorated the village church for the pretty ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Allison of Kilbride and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John McMullen, Milton Heights. Organist for the ceremony was Mrs. H. R. McDonald of Kilbride, and Mrs. Stewart Lockie of Milton sang Because and O Perfect Love.

Lace Over Net
The bride chose a floor length gown of Chantilly lace over net and taffeta, with a sabrina neckline embroidered with sequins and pearls.

Tiers of pleated net and chantilly lace formed a cascade down the back and a tiara of seed pearls held her shoulder length veil in place. A single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom, completed her ensemble and she carried a white orchid and Stephanotis on a white Bible. She was given in marriage by her father, William Allison.

Miss Joyce Allison, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Jo Anne Henry, friend of the bride, was bridesmaid. They wore full-skirted gowns of tropic water n'organza featuring daintily gathered bodices and off-the-shoulder sleeves, with matching shoes and gloves. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Coates, niece of the groom, and Miss Linda Allison, sister of the bride. Both wore similarly styled dresses of white organdie over taffeta, trimmed with tropic water n'organza, and white shoes and gloves. All the bride's attendants carried bouquets of white chrysanthemums and pink roses, their headresses were coronets of flowers and pearls, and all wore rhinestones and pearl necklaces, a gift of the bride.

Three Attendants
Peter Watson of Kilbride was groomsman while George Hardland of Kilbride and Murray McConnell of Milton were ushers.

The Kilbride company of Girl Guides formed a guard of honor for the couple as they left the church.

About 75 guests were present for the reception at Kilbride Community Hall, attending from Acton, Burlington, Milton, Milton Heights, Whitby, Barrie, Hamilton, Kilbride, Brampton, Oakville, Simcoe, Campbellville, Lovellville and Aberfoyle. Standards of pink and white mums decorated the building for the reception.

The bride's mother received, wearing an arnel jersey royal blue dress with matching hat and gloves, black accessories and a gardenia corsage. Assisting was the mother of the groom, wearing a floral acetate faille dress with matching hat and gloves, black accessories and a gardenia corsage.

Visit Detroit

Special guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wetherelt of Kilbride, grandparents of the bride. The organist, Mrs. McDonald, was also organist at the wedding of the bride's mother.

For Parents Only Morning Slow Poke

"Tommy is a slow poke in the morning! He takes ages to get dressed. I despise mothers who continually nag at their children — but what can I do to cure him?" Mrs. Black asked her mother.

"Don't worry too much about his slowness in the morning. He's only a little fellow . . ."

"But he should have time to eat a decent breakfast — and I don't want him to be late for school. Dawdling over dressing may seem a small fault, but it is terribly annoying!"

Until a child starts to school, the exact time when his dressing is completed does not matter very much to his mother. But once he has that "nine o'clock deadline" for greeting "teacher", dawdling over dressing may become a real problem in a busy household. It is a good plan to establish the earlier breakfast hour for a child several weeks before he or she goes to school for the first time.

Time Means Little
Adults must remind themselves that although time means a great deal to them, to a small child the passing of time means very little. Children hate to be hurried. Sometimes one of the simplest ways to overcome tardiness in the morning is to call the child a quarter of an hour earlier, see that he is out of bed and thus give him a longer time to put on his clothes. A large alarm clock on his dresser with the time marked when he should be starting on his way to breakfast is useful for some youngsters.

Choosing what he is to wear and laying out his garments on a chair beside his bed the night before is a practical suggestion. When a little girl is sleepy, it may be confusing, and take several moments to decide, whether to wear the blue dress with the white collar or the green jumper and yellow blouse. Small socks, shoes and underwear are apt to be misplaced under the bed or in the clothes closet or bathroom in the process of getting ready for bed! Making a game the night before of leaving them all out in readiness for the next day works wonders.

Mothers should check on the physical condition of a child who dawdles continually. Is he slow because he is feeling sluggish? Perhaps he needs a tonic or a medical check-up? A low grade sinus infection can make him feel very "loggy" in the morning. It might be that his bed-time hour is a little late — or his sleep has been interrupted. Maybe his bedroom is not well ventilated? More rest and fresh air may make all the difference.

No Chatter
If there are several children in the family, the business of getting ready for school may be delayed as they argue with each other. One mother finally made the rule, "Wait to talk until you get to the breakfast table". Another parent discovered that arranging for two brothers to dress in different rooms speeded up this process. If they were together, inevitably they started fooling around and laughing at each other's antics. Still another parent gave special praise to the first child to appear at the table.

Some children are not very dextrous with their fingers. A little help from mother in tying shoe laces or doing up a button may be just what is needed to finish getting dressed. Most children's clothes today are simply made and easy to get into. But if a child is a dawdler, mother should check that buttonholes are large enough and zip-pers are easy to handle.

Small Reward
A pleasant prospect ahead is a real inducement to finish a task like dressing. What tiny youngster doesn't enjoy a cheery greeting and a "morning kiss" when he comes to breakfast. If possible, give Junior a small chore which he likes, such as bringing in the morning paper or the milk or letting the pussy cat outside before he sits down to the table.

Children do relish a bit of fun at breakfast. If more mothers would take time for a little nonsense, instead of worrying so about nourishing meals and promptness at school, there would be less dawdling!

Once in a while, the real reason why a small child lingers over getting his clothes on, is because he doesn't want to go off and leave mother. Perhaps being at home is much more fun than going to school. Maybe he feels shy with teacher or afraid of some of the bigger children? It is quite possible that he thinks his clothes are "different".

How he dreads the other youngsters making fun of him! If there is a real reason why he is dawdling over dressing, mother should try to discover what it is, and do something about it.
