THE REASON IT ACTUALLY DOES PAY TO SHIP YOUR LIVESTOCK—R. F. & A.

More buyers • More competition • Auctioneer that knows cattle • Ringman is a proven salesman • Sorting that pays dividends • Modern new ring facilities • Government operated scales

The Ontario Stockyards is centrally located to the biggest percentage of packing plants in Ontario and all have representative buyers at "The Auction" establishing one of the most competitive markets in Canada. Bill Armstrong, your auctioneer for Richey, Fay & Armstrong, has a good background of livestock marketing and sound judgment of the value of the cattle he is selling. Either Bob Richey or Barney Fay, each a distinctive and aggressive salesman, combine with Bill as ringman to give you selling power to obtain HIGHEST POSSIBLE PRICES. R. F. & A. make every effort to present your cattle in the ring the way they should be. Selling mostly to professional buyers, proper sorting pays in higher dollar returns to the owner. With the completion of the third new ring and ample sorting pens, you have the best in auction selling accommodation. There are no more accurate weights in Canada than at the Ont. Stockyards. All scales are under government supervision, checked frequently, and operated by bonded weighmen.

So remember when you have LIVESTOCK TO MARKET FOR THE VERY BEST POSSIBLE IN PRICE, WEIGHT SERVICE AND YARD FACILITIES—SHIP

For Parents Only
Don't Plant Fear!
by Nancy Cleaver

"I have had a little girl tell me she was sensitive to pain. When I asked her how she knew this, she said her mother had told her so." A Halifax dentist reported to the annual clinic of the Montreal Dental Club. It was his conviction that children would not fear the dentist if this emotion was not implanted by parents. Do you think this a sound conclusion?

It is a good plan if a parent can help a child to anticipate what might be a fear provoking situation such as a dentist's visit. The child who is prepared is less apt to be afraid. Parents should never deceive a child about the cause of fear. Neither should they shame him or silence him when he expresses his fear. Repressing fear drives it underground into his subconscious mind.

Fear of Dogs
Talking over the situation, which frightens him, with a sympathetic adult, helps a child to face his fear, and understand it. A child who is fearful of dogs may gradually be encouraged to get to know and love one particular gentle dog. Unnecessary fear is a terrible handicap. Help your child to be free of useless fears and cultivate his courage to face necessary fears!

Our mental hospitals and medical clinics are filled to overflowing with fearful, worried adults. Much of their lack of mental balance can be traced back to an insecure, unhappy childhood. Fear was used often to make them conform to certain standards of behavior.

Everyone from the earliest days experience some fear; a new baby exhibits fear of sharp noises and is fearful of falling. Children fear getting hurt. Sometimes they are frightened of animals and of burglars. They dread being alone, being left in the dark. Strange sights, startling events and strange noises also scare them. Children as well as adults, suffer from bad dreams.

Constant Fear
In homes where punishment is very harsh, or where the mother is ill-tempered or the father drinks, a child may live in constant fear. The older child dreads failure. Parents sometimes place a child in an impossible situation by expecting him to excel in sports or make high marks beyond his ability.

What does fear do to a child's body? Sometimes it is accomnecessary for self-preservation. A child should fear the dangers of traffic sufficiently to stop and look both ways before crossing a street. Parents encourage a child to face any fear and make an intelligent reaction to danger. There is nothing more contagious than cowardice! The mother who is terrified by thunder storms is bound to affect her child. She should help him understand what causes lightning and thunder. If she can calm herself her own poise will reassure her child.

THE DEALER'S PURPOSE

An automobile dealer who wants to stay in business knows that one of his most important jobs is selling cars.

That is because he's only made a sale when he delivers a car; he doesn't acquire a customer until he has won the buyer's goodwill by helping him get the satisfaction he expects throughout the years.

Even the finest and most expensive automobiles are, after all, still mass produced products. And though manufacturers become more efficient each year, production flaws still creep in. That is why an owner's satisfaction is largely dependent upon the dealer from whom he buys.

Acquiring lasting customers is why, of course, we have six people in our service and other departments compared with three in sales. Our service department as such is not a money maker and other departments help to carry it. But by performing its principal function in our dealership—to pre-service and then stand behind our new cars and recondition our used—the service department makes sales possible and then goes on to create lasting customers.

Many of our customers automatically buy their car from us every year—every two years—or at some set interval. Our efforts to acquire ever greater numbers of repeat customers with service and fair dealing is not prompted by ethical principles alone. The history of our industry over the years proves clearly that for lasting success, a dealership must gain the loyalty and respect of the people in the town where it exists.
