TB association expands concern, delegate learns

Increasing scope of responsibility, being undertaken now by the Tuberculosis Association, impressed Acton reeve Bert Hinton, when he attended the 67th annual meeting of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, combined with the ninth annual meeting of the Canadian Thoracic Society, at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec City.

He represented Halton County Tuberculosis and Health Association, taking in the convention for his own information and at his own expense. The Canadian Association is also considering adding "and Health" to its title, as Halton has done.

Few board members attended the meeting — those registered were mostly staff and the talks were technical. There were sessions on nursing and rehabilitation as well.

Among the speakers were Dr. Halfdan Mahler, Geneva, who expressed deep concern over the continuing incidence of TB in underdeveloped countries of the world; and the doctor from Theford Mines who specializes in improving conditions there to prevent lung disease.

Air pollution, and the problem of smoking, enter into the consideration of the group.

Now, with speedier cures for tuberculosis, not as many hospital beds are filled, but there are still many cases. Those over 60 can be a special problem as carriers of disease, Mr. Hinton learned.

The Association benefits greatly from the general Christmas promotion of seals which includes all of the U.S. and Canada. Local contributions support research and broadening fields as well as detection and treatment of tuberculosis.

Mr. Hinton said he learned that Mrs. Lunau, Halton Association's capable secretary, is most highly regarded among her colleagues. She did not attend the meeting in Quebec City.
