Milton hospital co-operating in newest school of nursing

Construction is about to commence on the new Credit Valley School of Nursing. This building, located on the land to the south of the South Peel Hospital in Cooksville, will house and educate 300 nursing students. Co-operating in the program by providing clinical experience for the students will be hospitals in five areas, Brampton, Cooksville, Georgetown, Milton and Oakville.

The building consists of a residential tower rising from a two storey podium containing the educational areas.

Though not obvious to the casual viewer, the residence planning is very different from the typical student residence with its rows of identical rooms strung along endless corridors. While 90 per cent of the students are housed in single rooms and the remainder in double, by means of a split level floor system, the rooms are divided into small groups of rooms or "houses" to preserve a sense of intimacy in the interior of the building. Each "house" share a kitchenette, sewing and ironing rooms, etc. and by so doing will, in the philosophy of the designers, avoid the "institutional atmosphere".

The fully air-conditioned school which forms the base of the building follows today's educational thinking in providing the utmost in flexibility to accommodate changing curricula and methods of teaching. Flexible classrooms with operable walls can handle large or small groups from the entire school down to individual studying in the small seminar rooms.

In every way this building has been designed to be one of the most modern and progressive residences and schools of nursing in the province. The building will be ready for partial occupancy by September 1968 when the first class will be enrolled. Final completion is expected before the end of 1968.

The cost of this project, including land, furnishings and equipment, is estimated at $3,417,388. A grant from the Province of Ontario for $3,036,674 will cover the major portion of the cost with the balance being raised through a mortgage loan from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

J. W. Ostler, vice-chairman of the board of the school along with Dr. C. A. Martin represents the Milton District Hospital.

In the recent expansion program at the Milton District Hospital, a classroom was constructed to provide teaching facilities to approximately 15 students. The students will receive their practical experience in the Obstetrical, Medical, Surgical and Paediatric Units at the hospital.

Because it is not practical or economical for small hospitals to have their own nursing schools, the Regional School has been developed. The concept of the regional school provides teaching facilities in one location, and provides practical experience at the participating hospitals.

All inquiries regarding the School of Nursing should be directed to the Director of the School, Miss O. Hubbard, c/o South Peel Hospital, Cooksville.

Anderson - Mathies

The Church of Our Lady in Guelph was decorated with red and white gladioli upon the altar for the September 30, double-ring ceremony of Pauline Anne Mathies and James Patrick Anderson. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Amos Mathies of Campbellville and the groom is the son of Mrs. Madeline Anderson of Guelph.

Father John Noonan officiated at the wedding ceremony with the groom's younger brother Peter assisting in the mass. The soloist and organist was John Marion.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in an empire A line gown of pure silk organza with guipure lace enhancing the neckline, lips of elbow sleeves and hemline, and fanning appliques on the flowing chapel train. A headpiece of organza flowers and satin leaves held a shoulder length veil of illusion.

The bridal bouquet consisted of cascading red roses and white stephanotis.

The bride's attendants were Miss Anne Wheelihan of Campbellville as maid of honor, the bride's sister, Miss Janice Mathies and friends Miss Brenda Hardy and Mrs. Susan Brethel.

All were gowned alike in floor length, ruby red ottoman dresses featuring a fitted princess bodice and defining waistline. Enhancing the dress was a panel flowing from a bow at the low neckline.

Matching shoes and headpieces consisting of a velvet rose and leaves and tulle veil complemented their cascading bouquets of red roses and white carnations with white velvet ribbon entwined and hanging loosely. They all wore single strands of pearls, a gift of the bride.

Frank Wheelihan of Port Credit was groomsmen. The groom's brothers Ron and Jack Anderson and the bride's brother Don Mathies were ushers.

The reception and dance were at the McCrae Legion, Guelph. The groom's mother received wearing an olive green double knit dress and coat ensemble with matching felt hat and accessories. A corsage of pink carnations completed her outfit.

Leaving for a honeymoon trip to northern Ontario, the bride wore a beige tweed walking suit trimmed with a fox collar, with dark brown accessories and a coral corsage. They have taken up residence north of Campbellville.

Interesting programs at three workshops

The workshop held at Christ Church, Clarkson, on Monday, October 30, was the final one of a series by the Halton Presbyterial United Church Women. The morning sessions were identical at each workshop and covered every phase of the work of women in the church.

Some of the methods used were: dramatic discussion starters, play reading, skits, films, film strips, tape recordings, panels and plays. The afternoon program dealt with a different theme at each workshop.

At Clarkson, the theme "The Status of Women" was the title of a talk given by T. M. Holden in the absence of Peter MacWilliams, O.C. A panel "The Details of Preparing a Brief on the Status of Women" was given by Mrs. E. M. Flowers and her committee.

At St. Paul's, Milton, on October 18, the subject was "New Ways in Finance." This was presented by Mrs. D. E. McFadden, president of Hamilton Conference U.C.W., assisted by Mrs. Harry Schaaf, Mrs. G. F. House and Mrs. E. S. Leaker. The new way in finance is "Self Determination."

At East Plains, Burlington on October 24, the theme was "Three Ms in Programme." A panel headed by Mrs. Kenneth Moyer of Lundy's Lane United Church dealt with the three Ms — (1) methods, (2) materials and (3) motivation.

The large book display at each workshop created much interest and nearly $300 worth of pamphlets and books were sold.
