125 at 4-H careers seminar hear lectures on future work

About 125 people were present at the Halton 4-H Careers Seminar held on Thursday at the Ontario School for the Deaf, Milton.

The audience heard from several special speakers during the course of the evening. Donald Taylor of the Ford Motor Company in Bramalea spoke on "Industry as a Career" for agriculturally trained people. A great deal of engineering and capital goes into the production of farm implements produced by the Ford Motor Company.

George Greenless, Assistant Sales Manager for the Ralston

Purina Company, Southern Ontario area, spoke on sales as being a career that students with an agricultural background and with a degree or diploma might consider. He indicated that the degree of diversification in the field is vast, but stated, as did Mr. Taylor, that the better a person's education the more promising is his future.

Peter Hannom, a Guelph area farmer and a graduate of the University of Guelph, stated that a person should enter the career best suited to him, whether it be sales, industry, or farming. He said the farmer of today and the farmer of the future must be a competent manager, capable of handling large amounts of borrowed money.

Geoff Taylor, former Extension Assistant for the counties of Halton and Peel, spoke on the Civil Service (especially the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food) as a career. It was indicated by Mr. Taylor that service is the aim of every extension worker. He emphasized, as did the other speakers, that education was the prime factor in determining the depth of a person's opportunities as he faces the challenge of his career.

Mrs. Jean Norry, a Brampton resident, spoke on the vast field of Home Economics, now better known as Household Science. A person entering such a career, after obtaining a degree or diploma, may find themselves in such professions as teachers, dietitians, home economists, or demonstrators for large firms. Mrs. Norry startled a few male members of the crowd when she announced that there were careers available for men having a degree in Food Science, working in quality control, large kitchens, or catering services.

A panel of 4-H members quizzed the speakers, and questions were invited from the audience.

Lunch was served and the June 4-H club meeting, (held in the form of a seminar), was adjourned.

Local girl chosen for 4-H conference

On June 25, 26, 27 and 28 the annual Girls' Conference for 4-H Homemaking Club members will be held at the University of Guelph. Two hundred delegates from all parts of Ontario will meet together and take part in group discussions and listen to speakers on the theme "A Girl and Her Goals."

Halton County 4-H Homemaking Clubs will have three delegates representing them at Guelph. The girls are Irene

There will be many special speakers during the three and a half days, including Dr. Ethel Chapman from Toronto and Dr. Margaret McCready, Dean of Macdonald Institute. During the conference the girls will have an opportunity to see some exhibits which have been presented at Achievement Days throughout the province. The culmination of the Girls' Conference will be a banquet at Creelman Hall on Thursday evening.
