Hire two new police officers

Two new constables for Milton's police department were hired by Milton Council Monday, following recent resignations.

Hired to replace W. Hardy was Gordon Crooks, 31, presently on the police staff at the University of Waterloo and with 13 years experience in police work, some in England.

James A. Gibb, 35, of Acton will replace D. Langdon. He is presently in security work but previously had nine years police experience.

Both constables are to join the local force about August 1.

Councillors were told there were no applications for the position from present Milton residents.

Councillor G. Krantz explained the committee reviewed 12 applications and interviewed six applicants.
