Canada Week '74 stimulates pride House in flood area

A variety of social and cultural festivities designed to stimulate pride in Canada and foster dialogue among Canadians will highlight Canada Week 1974 which opens June 24 and climaxes on the Country's national holiday July 1.

The week is sponsored by the Canada Committee, a country-wide organization of members of business, professional and cultural groups committed to fostering Canadian unity. Theme of the celebration is "Canada - Think about it!"

In cities, towns and villages from Newfoundland to British Columbia, celebrations will include parades, concerts, folk festivals, art and essay contests, special displays, pageants, sports events and many other activities. All Canadians will be encouraged to fly the flag and wear the Canada Week emblem.

Joining with the Canada Committee to assure success of the Week will be a large number of social, business, civic and cultural organizations across the country.

The week-long celebration is under the honorary chairmanship of the Prime Minister of Canada, the ten provincial Premiers and commissioners of the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

In urging Canadians to participate actively in Canada Week, Prime Minister Trudeau said: "In a world in the throes of so many tragic upheavals, it is important to realize that our strength lies in our diversity, that our differences can contribute to a strong and productive unity . . . if our resolve is strong enough, we can make of Canada a country which will satisfy our deepest aspirations — a country where human values are respected, where every one can share a sense of national pride and purpose."

No government agency can be held responsible for flooding that occurred May 16 according to Murray Stephen, General Manager of Halton Region Conservation Authority.

Stephen was writing to the Halton Regional Council in reply to a query about damage done to R. Kinra's home on Woodward Ave. in Milton.

Stephen said the house was built well within the regional storm flood plain and will be subject to future flooding until the channelization of the 16 Mile Creek is completed.

Annual Manor dinner honors retiring staff

The annual Halton Centennial Manor dinner to honor retiring staff members and retiring members of the Board of Management was held at the Manor Wednesday evening.

During the evening Mrs. John Hopkins, president of the auxiliary presented a color television to Mrs. M. Dwyer and Herb Read. They are co-presidents of the residents' council. The auxiliary works in many ways to assist residents and provide funds for facilities not otherwise available.

Retiring nurses Mrs. Muriel Ross and Mrs. Ella Peddie along with cook Mrs. Margaret Stover were honored and presented with gifts.

Board members Retiring board members Les Preston and Bob McCuaig received gifts from Milton Mayor Anne MacArthur and Regional Chairman Allan Masson respectively.

Peter Marks of Acton was among those leaving the board of management last year but was absent from the dinner.

Preston spoke of fond memories of the county system of government. Bob McCuaig, a former reeve of Milton, explained he had missed being a part of the council but suggested that after talking to those now on council for an hour, he wasn't sure he didn't win the last election.

Special guests Community services chairman David Coons was master of ceremonies during the evening. Among special guests attending the dinner were MP Terry O'Connor, Liberal candidate Dr. Frank Philbrook, Barb Snow, wife of MPP for Halton East Jim Snow, home physician Dr. Ivan Hunter and Herb Soane a representative of the Ministry of Social and Family Services.

Members of regional council and their wives attended along with several staffers from the Manor.
