Nation wide display

Two local women have won nation-wide recognition for a banner they made and entered in a Presbyterian Church centennial competition. Edna and Edith Joyce, members of Boston Church, designed and hooked the large banner which reads

"This do in remembrance of me, 1875, 1975, 2075." Although not chosen as a winner in its respective class the banner had been chosen, along with 100 of the 300 entries, to go on display for one year across Canada.

Banner competition coordinator Sheila A. Kirkland commended the women on their banner by saying, "Your banner is very well designed and excellent craftsmanship is displayed in the hooking. The colors you selected were used most effectively and the whole work is most artistic."

Old Church Ms. Kirkland commented

on how beautiful the banner will look when it is finally hung in the lovely old church at Boston. She urged the women to continue their work in this area.

The banner is three feet by four feet. The basic background color is gold with blue block printing inside a cathedral-shaped enclosure. A form of Christ in flowing robes is in the centre. Assorted colors resembling stained glass complete the outside edges of the hanging.

Halifax loses wartime image 2,000 at market

Not far away is another architectural gem, Province House, the seat of the provincial legislature since 1818. Its charming library, used as a courtroom for many years, once reverberated with the fiery oratory of Nova Scotia's best known native son, Joseph Howe, whose famous trial won freedom for the press in British North America. Halifaxians recall his memory by staging a Joseph Howe Festival each October.

Perhaps Halifax's current charm stems from the pleasant blending of historic and modern buildings. Local building regulations restrict the height of new office towers so that the panoramic views from Citadel Hill will be preserved for future generations.

Perhaps, also, it's the easy accessibility to the magnificent public gardens or the sylvan 186-acre Point Pleasant Park that gives downtown Halifax such a pleasant atmosphere.

Good restaurants and entertainment have boosted the city's image in the eyes of anyone who visited years ago and hasn't returned since. Whether you're a gourmet or a steak and seafood fancier, you'll find top-notch food in interesting restaurants and dining rooms all over the city.

Choice of entertainment

A couple of movie theatres once formed most of the entertainment in this port city. Now, there's such a wide choice — from good jazz clubs to intimate lounges to exuberant soul clubs — that you'll have to make decisions every night of your visit.

There are plenty of cinemas, but it's the thriving live theatre in the city that has erased the cultural backward image. The year-round professional theatre, Neptune, has been bringing first-class theatre to residents and visitors for more than 10 years. Its presence has whetted the local appetite for more live theatre and has, in part, been responsible for the growth of smaller semi-professional companies attempting to provide audiences with more avant-garde fare.

A visitor to Halifax is wise to check the program at the new Dalhousie University Arts Centre; he's almost sure to find something happening there, whether it's a rock show or symphony concert. Or it may be an evening of harness racing at nearby Sackville Downs, which boasts a dining room, lounge, and parimutuels for the enjoyment of spectators. Daytimes can be filled with golfing, swimming at nearby beaches, sightseeing on bus or boat tours, or the unique opportunity to cruise under sail for three hours on a 150-foot schooner, Bluenose II.

2,000 at market

Over 2,000 people attended Milton's Farmers' Market Saturday. Mayor of the Market Andy Frank noted the crowds are getting larger and the number of vendors greater as the season goes on.
