MILTON LIBRARY was officially dedicated May 25 and it is expected the building will be ready for occupancy Sept. 5. The split-level red brick building between Pearl and Bruce Streets has a partial basement area. The shape defies definition, the ultimate design emerging from the needs of the community. A landscaped pedestrian mall is planned for this front entrance area with benches for outside relaxation.

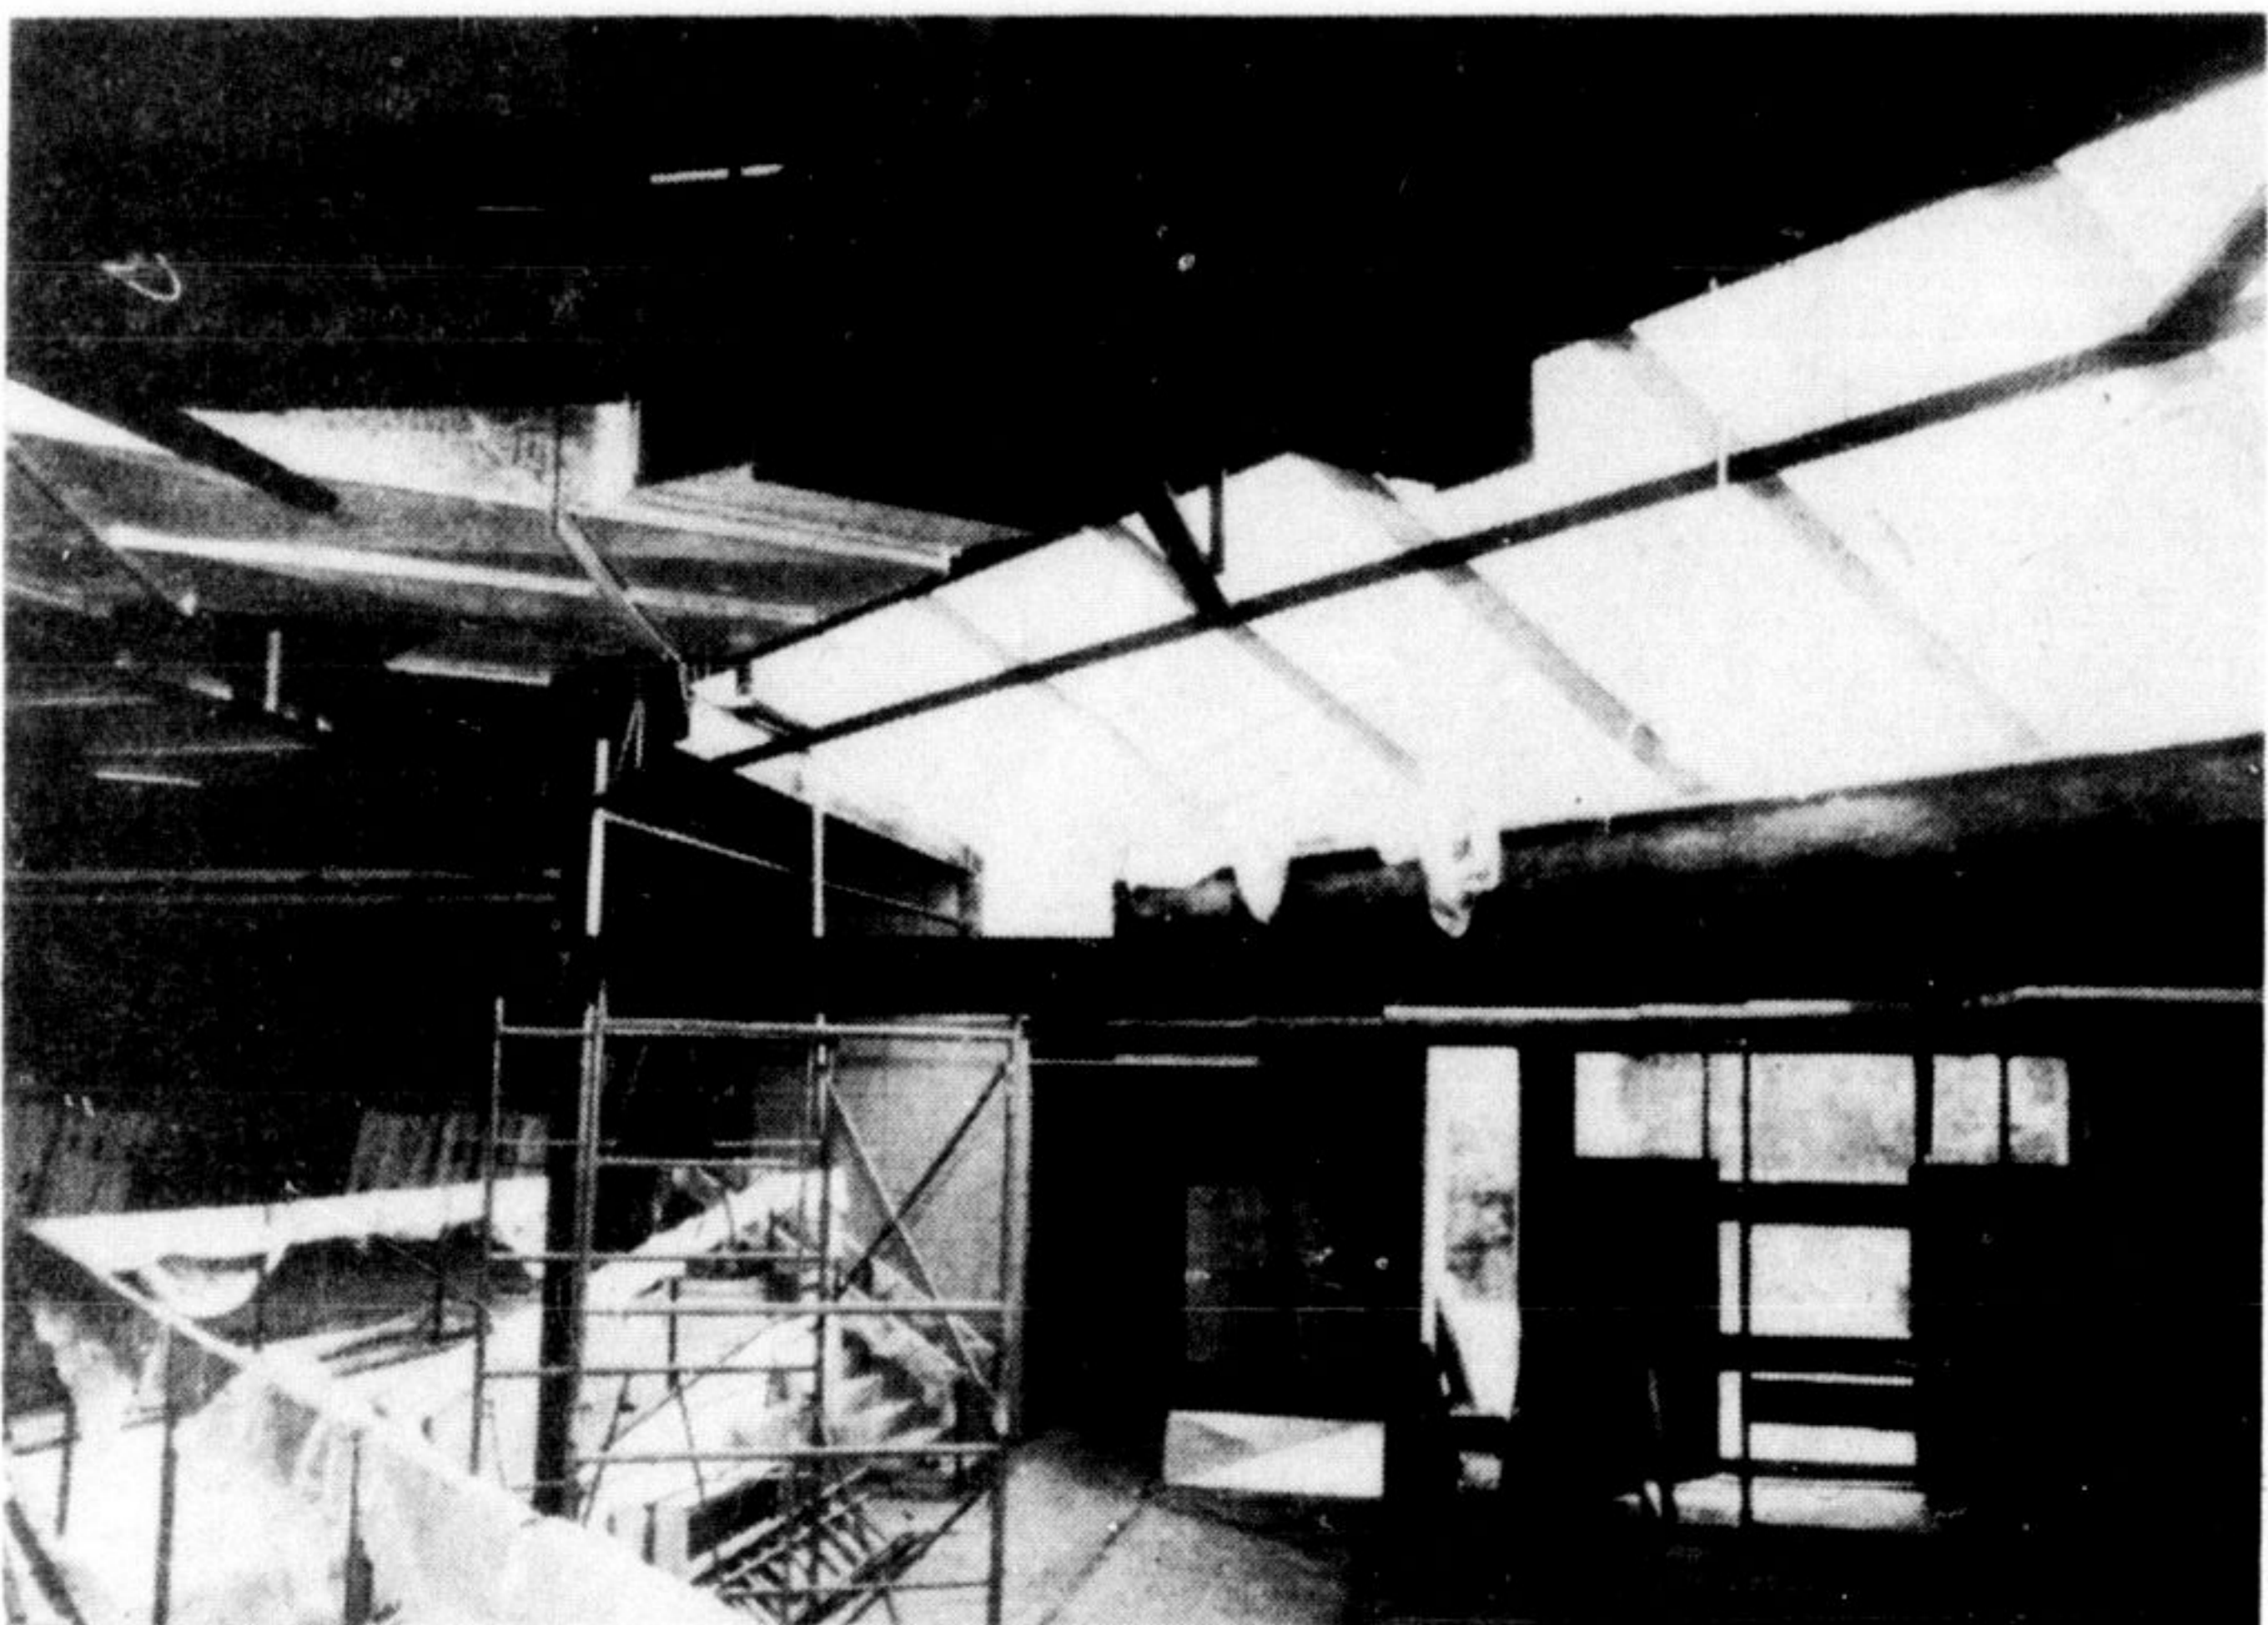

The site of Regina was first called Wascona, Cree Indian word for "Pile of Bones" from the accumulation of buffalo bones where hunters had run the animals into pounds for slaughter.

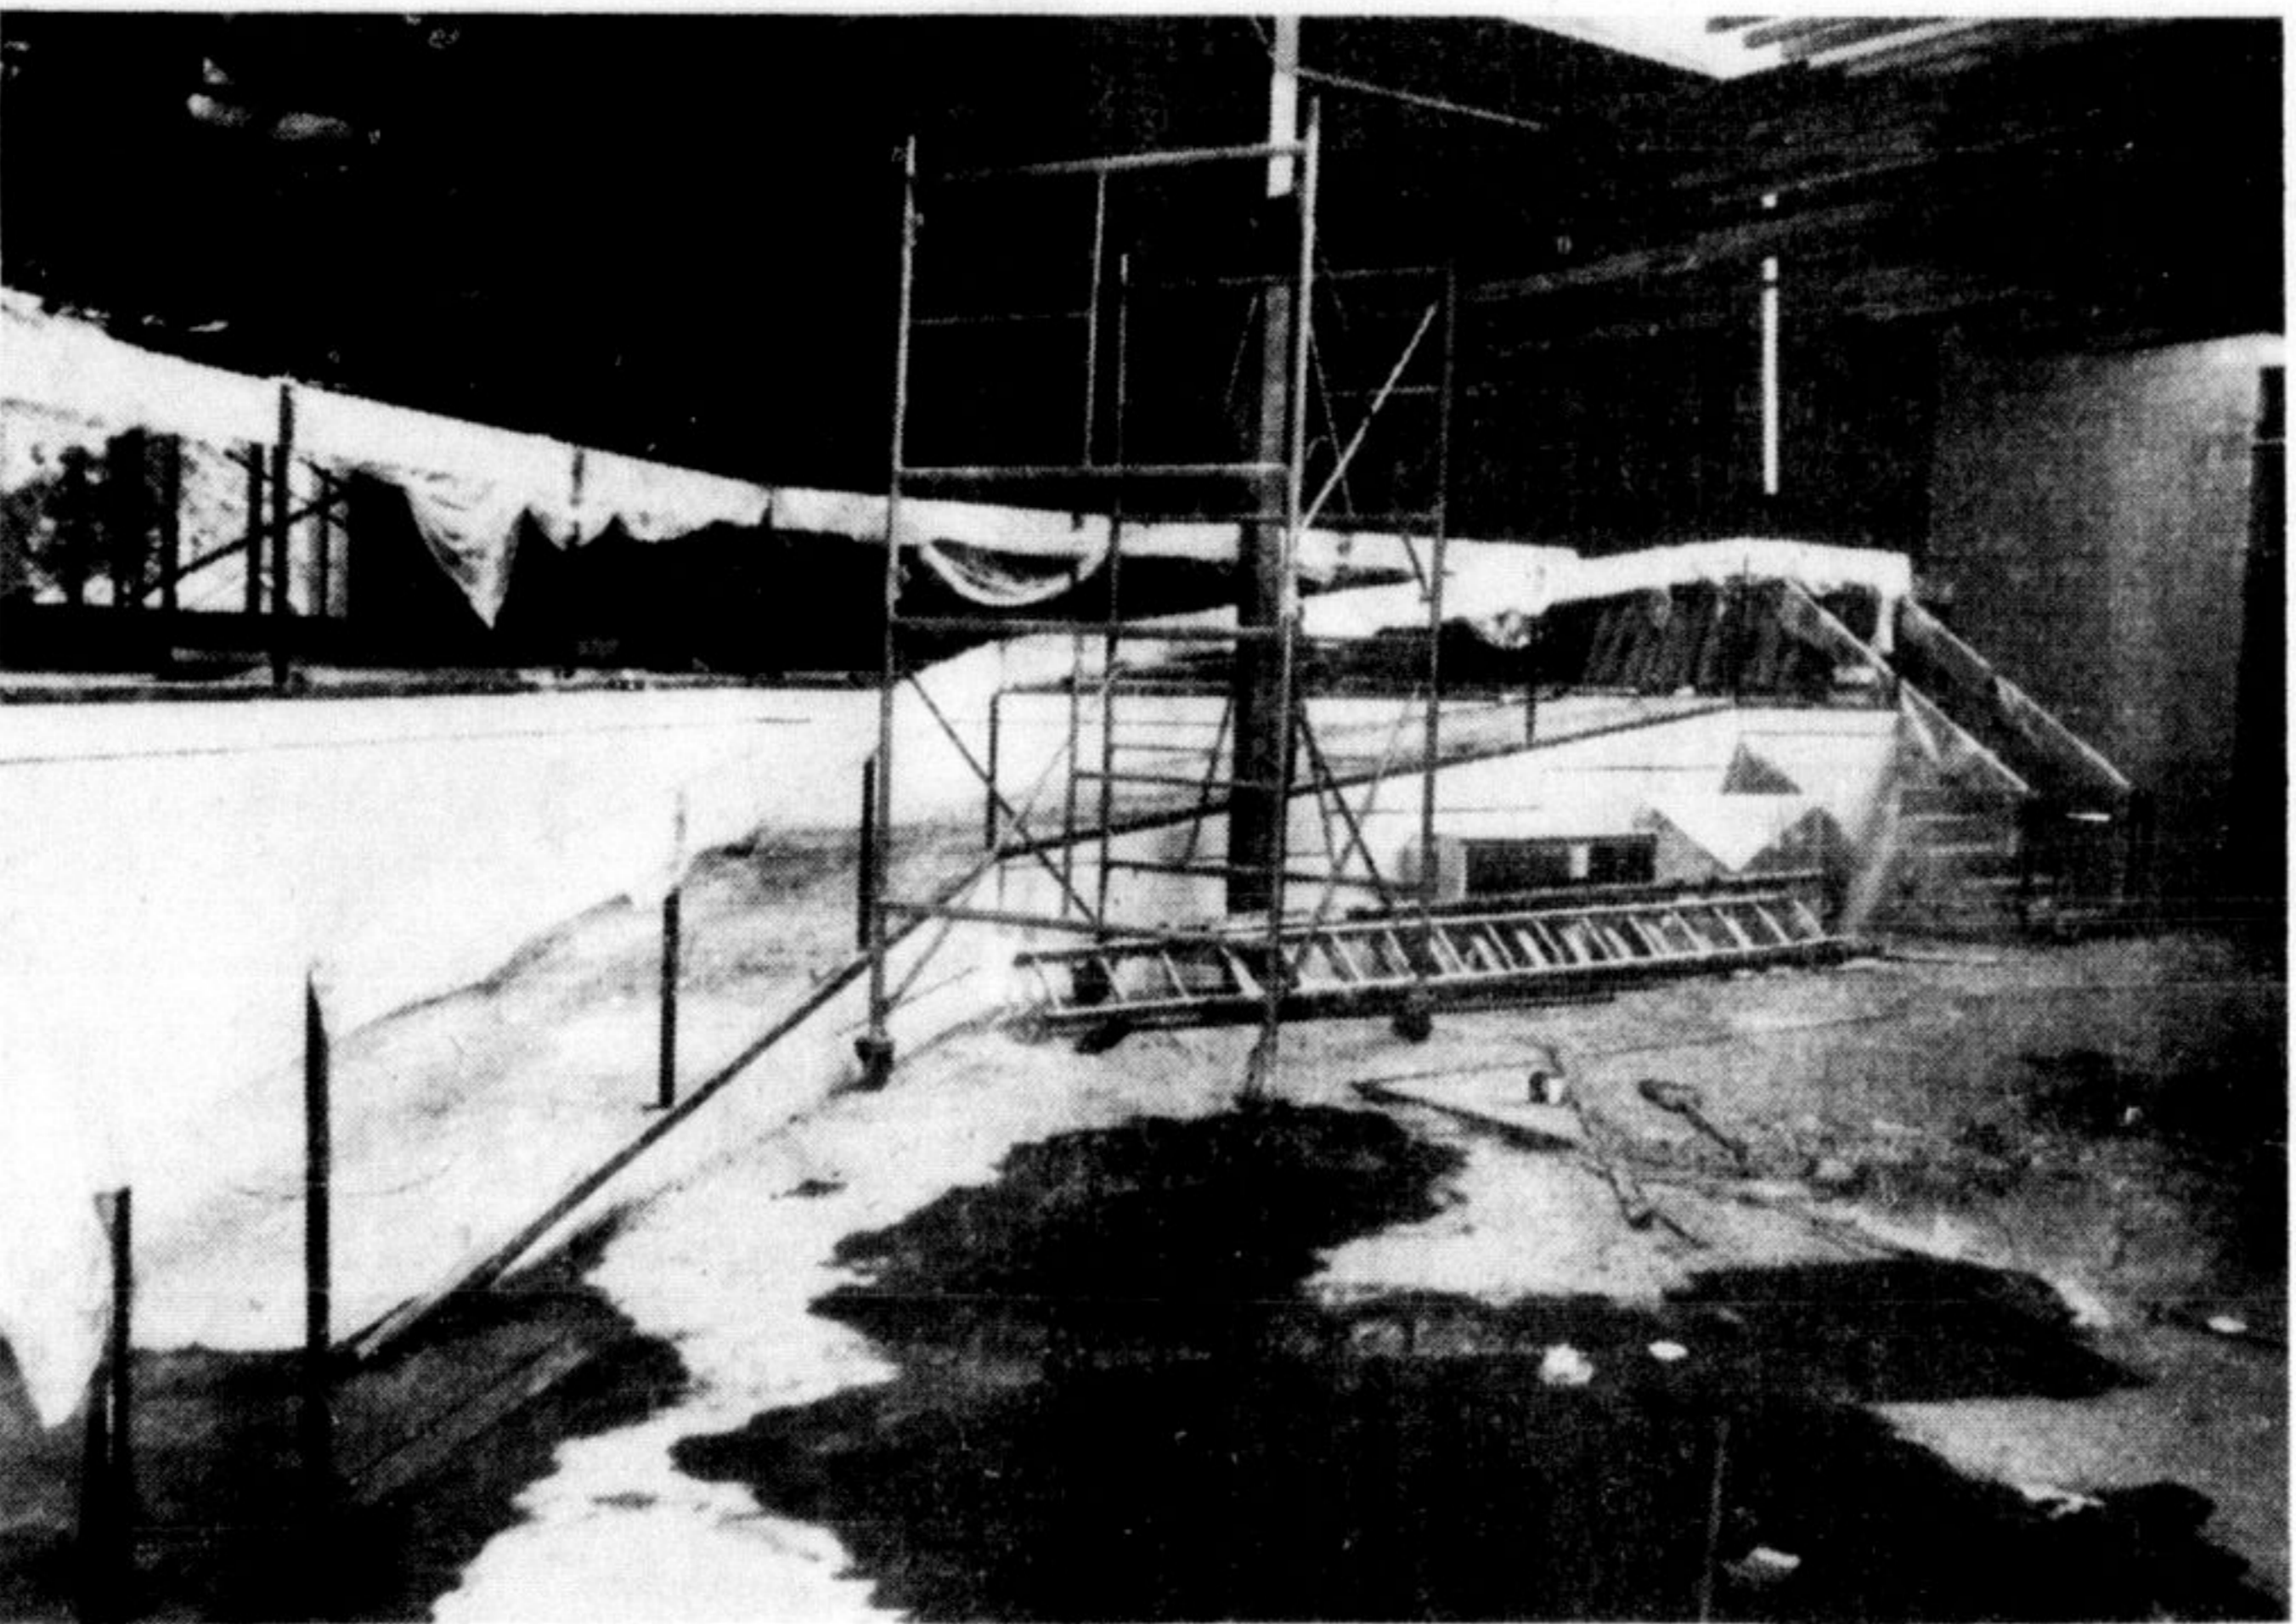

PANORAMIC VIEW from the window allows for visitors to the library to enjoy their reading in a relaxed and natural surrounding.

THE SECOND LEVEL is open entirely to the view of the first providing an adult non-fiction and reference book area. Beside it is the local history room where records of Milton's forefathers will be stored.

GLASSED FRONT ENTRANCE leads into reception area. The flooring here will be quarry tile, the rest of the building carpeted. Overhead skylight will provide for bright natural light in the reading areas.

USE OF RAMPS throughout the building are a special design of the library to accommodate the handicapped. The washrooms are also designed with a wheelchair in mind.
