Facilitator for HRHSC

Halton Region Human Services Council has selected Nancy MacPherson as the first facilitator to be hired by the council.

The facilitator will spearhead the operation. The council has been working together for two years now. Their objective is to co-ordinate the multitude of human services now available, to avoid duplication of services and to assist where possible in helping groups and individuals know what services are available to them and where.

Miss MacPherson is a graduate of the University of Guelph and Carleton University.

Only one third of Canada's total area has been brought under development to date. Less than eight per cent of the country is classed as occupied farmland.

Stump puller model

This commercially made model was built in 1967 and purchased at that time by the museum. It represents a relatively late style of machine used in the late 19th century and early 20th.

The frame is made of wood (oak or walnut) with vertical shaft and a core of iron.

An ox or horse was harnessed to the end of the pole coming from the peak of the triangular frame. There was a grip at the base of the vertical screw shaft attached to a stump.

The animal would move in a circular clockwise motion around the base of the machine. The shaft is threaded through an iron core at the peak of the frame, thus pulling out the stump with a screwing action.
