Martin Street fashions

The fashion show and arts and crafts display presented by Living Arts students at Martin St. Senior Public School Thursday night was termed a success as well as proof of the value of the Living Arts course.

The Living Arts course, comprising home economics, industrial arts and art, is a co-educational course at Martin St. and was the basis for having the show which met with the approval of the organizers.

Organizer Mrs. Linda Robertson, Mrs. Eleanor Fairley, Gary Sadler and Mrs. Beth Perham spent over 50 man-hours each, went through approximately 300 slides and motivated their students to be as creative as possible. They selected the best designs and the most professional looking clothing for their fashion show as well as selecting the best wood crafts and artwork for the display.

They received a reasonably good response from the parents of the students, with attendance of around 100 people.

Teacher John Shea did the voice track on the slide presentation at the beginning of the show, which was put together by the organizers with some help from a video-arts technician from the board of education.

Thursday, June 9 is election day.
