Campbellville intersection number one on repair list

The intersection of Guelph Line and Campbellville Rd. was given top priority for road improvements to correct unsafe conditions, in a traffic operations study presented to the Halton Regional public works committee Wednesday.

The report, conducted by Deleuw Cather Consulting Engineers and Planners, recommended the expenditures of nearly $400,000 to immediately correct unsafe road conditions in Halton.

The seven-month traffic study found 59 locations where roadwork will be necessary over the next five years.

John Ashwood, from Deleuw, suggested 80 per cent of the work should be done to prevent further traffic accidents and injuries.

However the committee agreed to look into the possibility of doing work to seven of the top ten priority intersections with funds currently available.

The repairs to these intersections, including Guelph Line at Campbellville, would cost the region about $7,000 after provincial grants.

Mr. Ashwood said the Guelph Line-Campbellville intersection's accident rate, which is more than three times the acceptable level, could be reduced with the use of low-cost engineering techniques to about $1,800.

He recommended prohibiting parking on both roads approaching the intersection, since many of the accidents there involved parked vehicles.

The three intersections in the top 10 not to be considered this year are Trafalgar Rd. at Leighton Ave., Oakville; Guelph Line at Mountsides Rd. and Mainway, Burlington; and Steeles Ave. at Martin St., Milton. These three projects involve expenditures totalling $140,300.

The report also listed six intersections which require immediate signalization at a cost of $246,000. Number one on the priority list was the intersection at Trafalgar Rd. and Sheridan College Dr. in Oakville, while the intersection at Trafalgar and Derry Rd. was second.

The traffic study, which was the first since the inception of regional government in Halton, cost an estimated $50,000 and would cost an additional $25,000 to update every second year, said Mr. Ashwood.
