Dear Sir: I trust that when council is considering Rd. and incorporating a grade separation, they also take into account the necessary and federal governments. To meet these requirements could be many years away,

It will be nice to know that trucks and through traffic can go around Milton and cross the tracks of CPR, while the townspeople of Milton can sit in their cars and wait while a freight train passes through These trains often have 90 to 150 cars, which can block all roads from Ontario St. to Bronte Rd.) or break down or even do shunting.

Planning Director Bob Zsadanyi estimates a total of 2,569 housing units are on the drawing boards and have been promised sewage plant produce a population of 8,533. The housing leaves just enough room for 1,467 persons in industrial areas or, taking Environment's criteria of 15 persons per acre, just acres of industrial land that can be serviced. The town's major industrial development is to be the 1,400 acre industrial park north of lighway 401, stretching from Highway 25 to Third Line and north to Five Sideroad. Under the Ministry criteria, there won't be room in the sewage plant if the whole area goes on full industrial services Zsadanyi told council last week that Milton's true industrial population is really only five persons per acre, according to a survey by the planning department year. The survey included industries such as Polysar which has since closed). Rockwell and P. L. Robertson working at peak production. If Zsadanyi's figure is used, the current sewage plant expansion could handle the housing plus close to 300 acres serviced industrial expansion.

"The Ministry of the Environment will probably not be Still not large enough persons per acre industrial requirement," the planner savings may be made when developments get underway. Lower densities may be used than planned. His figures showing the seven developers sewage capacity use the highest

The town can increase the plant's treatment capability more intensive treatment methods built into the expanded plant;

It can develop a comprehensive storm retention and purification system to treat storm runoffs, which are the highest contributor to high bacterial counts in the It can encourage "dry" industries to locate in the industrial park-each selfsufficient for sewage treat-And it can study expanding the treatment plant, large enough to accommodate the anticipated industrial expansion.
