

YEECH! Paul Crowe, 10, grimaces as he shaves gooey shaving lather from a balloon, carefully avoiding any nicks. Balloon shaving and apple bobbing events were held at the mall and downtown as part of Old Fashioned Days.

BANK of Nova Scotia customers got apples during Old Fashioned Days. (A better deal than Canada's drooping dollar?) Baby Robert Spurgeon, four weeks, would rather have his bottle. Dolores Melanson hands apple to John Spurgeon.

AWWW, YOU CHOSE THE COKE! Miltonians had fun trying the Pepsi challenge during the weekend as the Pepsi booth toured the downtown core, Mall and fair grounds. The taste test didn't always result in a victory for the sponsor's brand, admitted the attendant.

"WE'D LIKE TO SERENADE YOU," said the Old Fashioned Edition barbershop quartet from Oakville as they strolled around town Friday night — and they did just that at the Flea Market in the old fire hall. Buyers and sellers enjoyed their colorful rendition of a couple of old favorites.

Old fashioned costumes are revived for weekend

Getting into the spirit of Steam-Era, several downtown merchants and businesses organized window displays and encouraged staff to dress in costumes of the period, during a three-day Old Fashioned Days revival on the weekend.

Perhaps the most elaborate was the decor at the Bank of Nova Scotia. Using a railway theme, the display featured old-time rail artifacts and lamps, a "track" taped to the floor, and free apples for customers. Staff dressed in appropriate costumes.

Staff at Harris Stationery, Milton Greenhouses and Milton Travel were others who dressed for the occasion. Wally Mayes of Milton Music put on his straw boater, striped shirt and suspenders, when he remembered them.

Ann Harrison of Milton Travel, made a window display out of an antique silver coffee service belonging to her grandmother. She placed the service on a lace-edged tablecloth made by her grandmother and still in perfect condition.

Harris Stationery had a couple of old typewriters in the window.

Over at Milton Greenhouses, Gail Dunsmore borrowed some milk bottles and turn-of-the-century tins, including old baking powder tins and tea canisters, for the florist's window show.

In the window at Bus Knight's Men's Wear a number of items from Jimmy Hopkins' collection were tastefully displayed. Included were a steamer trunk a Tiffany-style lamp, paper shinplasters, Arrow shirt advertisements and a small pair of children's boots.

Downtown staff used to routinely dress in costume for Old Fashioned Days but the practice was discontinued in recent years until this year's attempt to revive it.

The three-day celebration also featured strolling minstrels (a barbershop quartet) plus a fun booth operated by Milton Jaycees. The Jaycees invited children to bob for apples, shave a soapy balloon and play a guessing game, with prizes offered. Their booth was at the Mall Thursday and Saturday, and downtown Friday and Saturday and it also was set up outside the fair grounds for the weekend.

The Pepsi Challenge booth was also in town for the weekend.
