Unit fee for waste program

There will now be an extra $100 levied per unit in subdivision agreements to help fund Halton Regional resource recovery programs.

The Solid Waste Resource Utilization Surcharge passed but only after several problem areas were brought up by Councillors.

Regional Planning Committee Chairman Roy Booth said he had trouble with a flat $100 per unit and said it would probably be better levied on density per unit basis.

Mr. Booth said in single family houses paying $100 there might be several people; but in a one-bedroom apartment, also at $100, there would probably be only one person involved.

"I just want to see it spread equitably," Mr. Booth said.

Councillor Steve Toth agreed saying "while it's a good idea, it's discriminatory."

Councillor Bill Johnson said he wanted an assurance that any monies put in the resource utilization fund would stay for that purpose not be diverted for other programs or to make up deficits.

After a lengthy debate on the $100 fee, it was decided to pass the recommendation but with the rider that the flat rate be examined by consultants.

The examination would look to an equitable rate using $100 as a guideline figure. Should the actual charge on a given unit be less than $100, it would be adjusted downward.
