Schools Art Show. On display at the Library hall all week is art by local students from Kindergarten to Grade 13.

Milton Family of Schools Art Show Local students display works

For the first time community members will be able to feast their eyes on a collection of art work by local students from Kindergarten to Grade 13 under one roof.

Milton Family of Schools Art Show is a new concept in exposing the type of art being created at each school by the various age groups. It will be on display at Milton Public Library Hall all this week.

Corrie Filman, who teaches art to Grades 6, 7 and 8 students at Sam Sherratt Public School, is chairing the art show. There are about 100 exhibits. She said the show began when teachers decided they wanted to ensure some sort of continuity in art programs from senior public school to junior high school level. It branched out from there.

"Primary and senior students can learn a lot from each other," she explains.

In corresponding with all the local schools, she asked for "a little bit of everything," giving the exhibit much variety. Everything from clay and plaster sculptures arranged in the library's glass display cases in the foyer to batik, pencil, pastels, pen and ink and acrylics are included.

The head of E.C. Drury High School art department, Jan Weresch, had some of his students arrange the collection of art work in the hall and commented on the value of art as a school subject.

"Art has the potential for individual self expression," he said.

No matter what the age level this individualized expression is apparent as visitors to the Family of Schools Art Show will discover. The week-long show is expected to attract many groups of students who will be seeing some of their own work on exhibit as well as picking up ideas from their peers.

Closed door session with school board and chamber

When Halton Board of Education trustees meet behind closed doors next week to explain their budgeting problems to municipal councillors, they will not have an official Milton representative.

Milton councillors decided Monday not to send one of their members to the session planned by the Board of Education to quell rising criticism over the $131 million budget trustees approved for 1982.

In their criticisms of the plan, councillors were divided over whether they disliked the idea or its secrecy more.

"I think the message is being missed here," commented Coun. Rick Day. "I understand the problems they are having. We don't have to go there to be told why their energy costs have gone up, or about their problems with the teachers federations."

"The whole problem is that the thing has become too big and unwieldy for local government," he said. "We're not complaining that they didn't try, it's just the whole thing about Regional education that has us upset."

The Board of Education plans a special information night May 25 to tell local councillors and members of the Chamber of Commerce about the factors that forced trustees to approve such a large budget hike.

The portion of the Board's budget to be paid by Milton has increased by 22 per cent and that has caused some anger among councillors and citizens.

"This system has just become too big, too expensive, too unwieldy and too uniform," he said.

"These decisions go higher than those part-time people down there," he added.

Coun. Don Knight added that Chamber of Commerce members would be meeting later this week to discuss the invitation they received to the same session "and the feeling is that they will not be attending either."

"The regional board of education is never going to be able to handle this problem because it is the problem," commented Coun. Day. "Our debate has to be with the provincial government that constituted Regional government in the first place."

Mayor Gord Krantz said it was the fact that the session was to be secret that made him reluctant to attend.

Obituary

Harv Prudham

Charles Harvey Prudham of Britannia Road, North Burlington, beloved husband of Evelyn Veal (nee Kersey) and loving father of David of Lethbridge Alberta, passed away at Joseph Brant Memorial Hospital on May 5th, 1982 in his seventy-seventh year.

Sadly missed by step children Mrs. William (Hazel) Pegg, Mrs. Tim (Alice) Cox, David Tansley, Mrs. Jack (Mary) Irish, Mervyn Veal, Mrs. Brian (Evelyn) Herron and Keayn Veal; also two sisters, Mrs. Laura Dixon of Derry Road and Mrs. Archie Cairns (Anna) of Milton RR 3, and a number of grandchildren and nephews and nieces.

Mr. Prudham is predeceased by Jessie Kersey Prudham and Beatrice Tansley Prudham, also by a brother George and a sister Janet Aitken of Edmonton, Alberta.

Mr. Prudham was of the fourth generation to farm the Prudham family homestead and was laid to rest in the Bethel Pioneer Cemetery located on the corner of the farm on Britannia Road.

Son of the late Charles and Annie Prudham, he was a member of Kilbride United Church and was well known and highly respected in the area.

Services were conducted by Rev. Alf McAllister of Carlisle. Pallbearers were Robert Dixon, Brian Herron, Keayn Veal, Mervyn Veal, William Cairns and John Clarke.
