

Shorter and softer

You don't have to be a model to have hair styles like these. Feathered and free-spirited describes the look this fall. Close cropped sides and longer hair on top and up front creates this short and soft style.

Shorter, softer and very free spirited

Shorter, softer and very free-spirited. Some might even venture to say a little untidy. But nonetheless, the women of Paris are wearing their hair just the way their fashion doctors ordered. "It's not just the models. Everybody is in style," says hairstylist Peter Chiaravolotti. So how come we're not seeing the latest designs of Paris being sported by the women in our communities? Chiaravolotti says it's because Canadian women are more conservative about their hair. They tend to shy away from new styles until they become safely popular and the possibility of looking unique has been washed away. This is partially because of a general lack of trust in the Canadian hairdressing profession, says Chiaravolotti. Clients do not give their stylists enough freedom in deciding what style would best complement their looks and way of life. Consequently, hairdressers are usually asked by their clients to do the same styles over and over again.

Parisian women can't wait for the chance to have their stylist give them the latest revamp.

However, they have fewer hairstylists there and the profession is more respected and trusted, says Chiaravolotti. In Europe, stylists have a much stronger influence. "Here we have no influence. But when the people go for it, they like it," he adds. Chiaravolotti and his brother, Tony, recently attended the World Hairdressing Championships in Paris, where they observed hundreds of top-notch hairstylists from all over the world demonstrate the latest in hair designs and techniques. This year's shorter cuts feature a close-crop at the sides, around half an inch, with longer hair on top and at the front.

Fall Close-Up...

HAIR:

Shorter-neat-off the face, or longer hair that has the look and feel of short-meaning controlled and tamed hair. New techniques - razor, shears and clipper cuts!

To tie in with the clothing of fall, winter 82 & 83 (which at present is cleaner, leaner, and narrowed lines) hair should not look cluttered.

Longer hair looks best when tied back, reminiscent of the 1920's.

The main point to remember is that clearly there is no one defined hair length or hair shape that is going to work for everyone all the time. The style you choose, "YOUR STYLE" should be easily adaptable to a number of clothes and mood changes, with a minimum of fuss, bother and most important of all time!

Ralph

MAKE-UP:

Night time news for all your special autumn occasions. The emphasis now is on intensely made up eyes and lips. The cheeks carry just a hint of colour.

The eye. Smoky, black-charcoal tones, lips most seductive in shades of reds and burgundys!

For a day look. The emphasis is still on the eyes and lips, but the overall colour scheme is toned down. The eyes smoky tones of grey, brown, navy, purple or green. The lips and cheeks, in russet tones. For a more casual look!
