ANOTHER LONG SCHOOL YEAR DRAWS TO AN END

By Dave Coupe

The second semester of this long school year is rapidly drawing to a close. Soon, my fellow students and I will once again be free of the chains and shackles of school, if only for a few brief months.

This semester however, was different from any other I have completed—I will actually be sad to see it end.

For the past few months I and several dozen fellow Milton students, have been participating in a co-operative education program. Since late February I have been working in the editorial department here, at the Canadian Champion.

Throughout this semester I was given the chance to learn about the business of journalism and had the opportunity to explore my own writing abilities. But by the very nature of being in a "real world" work situation I was able to develop skills from which I will forever benefit, regardless of the direction in which my career lies.

Teamwork, communication, and of course, responsibility are virtues needed throughout one's life. A co-op program is one of the best and easiest ways to develop these and other essential skills.

In a co-op program there is opportunity for everyone to develop not only skills of trade in which they have interest, but skills which can be applied every day for the rest of their lives.

Co-op is an opportunity which no one should pass up.
