

Harris says future bright

The provincial government is on track to meet its commitments on job creation, economic growth and better government, Premier Mike Harris said recently at a news conference marking the second anniversary of the 1995 election.

"Our initiatives are putting Ontarians back to work and restoring prosperity to this province," the premier said.

"I am proud of our government's achievements to date and look forward to building on our successes through the rest of our mandate."

Mr. Harris noted that virtually every economic indicator points to significant improvements since the government came to office on June 8, 1995:

- In job creation, Ontario led the provinces in 1996. The trend is continuing this year, with 40,600 net new jobs created in Ontario in May and 1,000 net new jobs created per day over the last three months.

- Economic growth this year should reach about 4 per cent, according to forecasts issued by the major banks.

- Welfare rolls are down by almost 200,000 people since the government took office.

- The deficit has been cut by almost a third since June 8, 1995 and the government is on track to having the books fully balanced by the end of its term.
