Rifle shoot, attack highlight cadet camp

Milton Optimist Air Cadets had a tiring but eventful weekend camp at the old army camp in Niagara-on-the-Lake on the Nov. 7-9 weekend. A total of 35 cadets plus eight officers and instructors went by bus on the Friday and returned home Sunday afternoon, tired but happy.

The first night they set up tents and organized the camp for the weekend. Tents were organized into six flights, each in charge of a corporal and a competition was held between the flights.

Each flight was issued rations for the weekend and was responsible for its own meals. Inspections were held each morning.

Fire rifles Saturday's main event under the direction of Range Officer Gus Olsthoorn was a rifle shooting drill, using regulation FN rifles. As well as shooting, the cadets manned the butts, changed targets, indicated scores, re-loaded and acted as sentries.

Each flight was timed through an obstacle course consisting of barriers, walls, pits, rope walks, etc. That evening a lecture was given on survival in the outdoors with little or no equipment or food.

As an exercise, a simulated attack was staged after dark with the cadets as attackers and the officers as defenders. The attackers had to get through the defense lines and into a "safe" area. It was a lot of fun but ended in cadets charging officers with unfair tactics (using two-way radios and car headlights) and one casualty was reported—Capt. Jim Anderson sprained his neck!

Orienteering The Sunday program included field exercises in orienteering and survival with Officer Cadet Jim Nisbit and Instructor R. Losole in charge. The cadets put into practice the techniques learned the previous evening. Points were also awarded in this competition.

Winner of the most points in the weekend competition was Cpl. Rick Asselton's flight, with Cpl. Brad Mitchell's flight a close second. Other corporals leading flights were Ross Kay, David Hayden, Nick Klip and Mark York.
