REMEMBER

CANADIAN LEGION

Imagine

Imagine fighting side by side,
A new found friend but then, he died.
Imagine leaving to go out alone,
Not knowing if you'd ever come home.

Imagine being eighteen years old,
But you were drafted, your life was sold.
Imagine having to say goodbye,
And acting brave trying not to cry.

Imagine saying to your son of four,
"I'm going away to fight a war".
Imagine lying in your bed,
Wondering if daddy is alive or dead.

Imagine living with the memories of death,
Having seen thousands take their last breath.
Imagine seeing bodies lying in the dew,
And wondering why this is happening to you.

Imagine fighting fight after fight,
Hearing horror stories night after night.
Imagine searching papers for "His" name
Thinking if he does come home,
it won't be the same.

Imagine the countless tears that were shed,
Now that they know father is dead.
When will they forget the things they saw? Never.
Those brutal memories will be with them forever.

Just imagine.

We were the young
We dreamed the dreams of youth;
of wealth, of fame, of love and children yet unborn.
But then, across the sea a threat arose,
an evil if left unchecked would spread and decent things consume.

We were the young, we heard the bugle call,
And so across the seas we went.
We fought, we feared; we cried and dreamed of home,
of friends of love,

And then we fought again. But now
our youth was gone
We knew the bitterness of hate, of war and fear.
How hard we tried; To win, to live.
But this was not to be.
And so we died. We who once were young.
No longer do we hear the bugle call,
We lay in foreign lands and oceans deep.
And sleep the dreamless sleep which lasts forever.
Remember us. We who once were young.
Oh please Remember us.
