For Mother's Day: Some "Scents" Of Love

Ever since it started back in 1908, Mother's Day has been associated with sweet scents.

When Anna Jarvis suggested the second Sunday in May should be set aside to honor one's maternal parent, she also requested people wear carnations to mark the occasion. Carnations were a favourite flower of her own mother.

Mother's Day received national recognition on May 9, 1914, when President Woodrow Wilson signed a joint resolution of Congress recognizing Mother's Day, and in 1915, it was declared an annual national observance.

Nowadays, many mothers and others are glad to get such sweet-scented gifts as these refreshing new fragrances:

- Fire and Ice Cool from Revlon, a fresh floral with a hint of sandalwood and musk. It's a sensual scent that's light enough for everyday. It comes in a custom-designed, frosted-glass bottle and is available in cologne spray, perfume, massage oil, body lotion, bath and body wash and bath salts.

- Cherish, a sheer, feminine floral, inspired by a woman's caring nature. The collection includes bath products as well as cologne spray in three sizes. It also comes in a special gift set of cologne spray plus body lotion.

- For women who like a light, bright, citrusy fragrance, there's Charlie Sunshine. The latest in the Charlie line of fragrance, it comes in a sunny yellow carton and is available in cologne spray, body lotion and body wash.

All of these fragrances and body & bath products can be found at local drug stores.

Whatever gift you choose to use to honor your mother this year, present it with love to her and thanks to Anna Jarvis.
