Good carpet can make a big difference in your home

A good carpet can add an air of elegance or cozy warmth to any room in your home. What should you look for when you set out to buy a new one?

Here are some pointers.

Choosing style and colour

Keep the floor treatment simple to make redecorating easier, or if there's a chance you might decide to use the room for something else. A more neutral decor also appeals to prospective home buyers.

Give colour a lot of thought. That great-looking swatch in the showroom could overpower your living room. Bring samples home, or have them delivered, and lay them out on the floor around the room.

How does the light affect them as the day goes on?

Mull over your options for a few days, and try out a variety of colours and shades. You could incorporate a bold splash of colour with a border or centrepiece on a more neutral background.

Scale and pattern should be appropriate to a room. Large patterns, particularly colourful ones, and dark colours seem to decrease a room's size. Busy patterns can be distracting and make decorating changes difficult. Light colours will make a room open up, and appear more spacious.
