

No junk cause

Owners of rust bucket cars can get rid of the old clunkers while feeling good about themselves thanks to a program offered by the Kidney Foundation of Canada.

Owners can call the Kidney Car Hotline and have their junk vehicle collected, free of charge, by a recycler. The car will either be recycled or sold, and the owner issued a tax receipt for a minimum of $75.

The Kidney Car Program accepts cars whether they are running or not.

For more information, call 1-800-565-5511.

Little progress in case after fourth appearance

Catholic school Trustee Joe Deoni will return to court this fall after making a brief appearance yesterday.

Mr. Deoni, 59, of Steeles Avenue, who faces a fraud charge, was remanded to October 5 in Ontario Court (provincial division) in Milton to set a trial date.

Mr. Deoni's lawyer told the court he's still waiting for full disclosure of evidence in the case from the Crown attorney.

Acclaimed last fall to the position of Milton school trustee (English) for the Halton Catholic District School Board, Mr. Deoni was charged in March with fraud over $5,000.

The charge alleges that Mr. Deoni took approximately $43,000 from Industrial Ceramics Ltd. on Nipissing Road, where he worked on contract as a bookkeeper from 1992 to 1997.

Monday's appearance was the often outspoken school trustee's fourth trip to court since being charged.

Scots entertainment with a twist comes to Milton, Oakville

Bagpipe music, dancing and swordplay will be featured at the Oakville Centre for the Performing Arts this week when the Tartan Terrors present Ceilidh '98.

The Scottish comedy team — which includes Milton performer Karen Chorney — hits the stage Thursday and Friday starting at 8 p.m.

Led by the brother/sister team of Ellen and Ian Irmisch, the Tartan Terrors provide a unique brand of entertainment that includes traditional highland dancing, storytelling and cutting edge comedy.

Cast members have wide-ranging resumes, everything from performances at the Stratford Festival and on the acclaimed television drama Road to Avonlea to teaching comedian Martin Short to dance.

The group performed at Allendale, Halton Region's senior residence in Milton, Monday afternoon at 2 p.m..

Tickets for Ceilidh '98 are $19 each and can be purchased by calling the Oakville Centre for the Performing Arts box office at (905) 815-2021.
