P.S. BLIMP Giving learning disabled a better chance in job market

By IRENE GENTLE

Special to the Champion

ately, education and understanding have taken away much of the stigma of living with a learning disability (LD).

What they haven't taken away is the difficulty of finding a good job with one.

That's why Garry Bedford, Fran Dandy and John Lubert of the Trillium School in Milton are hoping to change all that with a series of job training sessions. They're aimed at helping young LD adults who are finding it difficult making the transition from school to the work world.

"I've known a few learning disabled kids in my own community who really had a problem bridging between school and work," explained Mr. Bedford. "It's a shame to have a lot of things in place in schools and colleges and then just noth-

To fill that void, Mr. Bedford will be donating his time to help learning disabled young adults find their way into the job market through a series of learning sessions stressing everything from resume and letter of application writing, to job search and interview techniques.

Timing important

The course will also focus on when and how to bring up the disability.

"We'll have role playing situations to show how and when to mention it," said Mr. Bedford. "Would I want to put a LD on my resume? Probably not. Would I bring it up in an interview situation? Quite possibly, but here's when and how."

The course is aimed at instilling confidence as well as practical job techniques in LD adults.

"We want to help them learn to communicate how they learn to employers because they tend to learn differently," said Mr. Bedford. "It may take them a little more time but once they learn they are just as good or better than anyone else."

While the idea is still in planning stages, Mr. Bedford hopes to run sessions every Tuesday night in November, amounting to

New family doc may lessen crunch

A new family physician in town may help alleviate the current situation with regard to a lack of Milton doctors accepting new patients.

Dr. Mark Bacon, who came to Milton in July as an associate of Dr. Walter Koslowski, has opened his own practice at 350 Main St. E.

He also serves on the anesthesia staff at Milton District Hospital.
