Improved facility is open

A new facility for Halton and Peel youths in trouble with the law officially opened its doors just north of its former location on Boston Church Road Wednesday.

The recently-built MacMillan Youth Centre replaced the Delwood Program, which was located in a government-rented century house.

The former building's structure limited staff in working with the young residents, said executive director Colin Dart.

"The new facility has made a difference in the programs we want to provide," he said.

The new, open custody/detention centre for youths aged 12 to 15 years houses up to 18 youths already sentenced for criminal acts or awaiting court appearances.

The one-floor bungalow is equipped with a small, indoor gymnasium, while the previous facility only had a modest outdoor basketball court.

The Delwood centre also had three floors, which made it more difficult to supervise, Mr. Dart said.

Construction of the MacMillan Youth Centre — named after a former ministry employee who was dedicated to assisting Halton's troubled youths — began in September last year and wrapped up in the spring. Following some finishing touches, operation began in the fall.

Owned by the provincial government, the new centre opened with support from the Ministry of Community and Social Services and Community Resource Services, a non-profit organization that provides a range of programs and services for youth and their families.
