Milton works to make millennium memorable

Memories may last a lifetime but in Milton, millennium celebrations will run about a year.

Having recently unveiled its new millennium logo, the Milton 2000 committee is busy dreaming up a year's worth of events to make Milton the place to be in what is generally considered to be the first year of the new millennium.

The theme of the logo is Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow.

Celebrations will kick off with a new year's eve bash throughout the last hours of 1999.

Elvis impersonator Steve Kabakos and the popular band Three Men and a Drum

Machine will headline the party, which will likely take place outdoors in Milton's downtown.

To ensure that the night is a blast, fireworks will light up the sky as the old year, century and millennium bow out.

To keep the memories alive long after the last firecracker has fizzled, Milton 2000 is also planning a millennium garden.

Located at Chris Hadfield Park, the garden will be divided into three plots.

These will feature plantings from the past, present and future to dramatically illustrate the Milton 2000 theme.

A time capsule tucked away in a gazebo within the garden will guarantee that the memories of Milton in 2000 aren't lost.

Other events, such as a Milton reunion, will be scheduled throughout the year.

To keep residents up to speed on the latest happenings, a millennium events calendar will be published, likely in November of this year.

All Milton residents should receive a free copy of the calendar, allowing them to participate in the millennium celebrations.

The citizen-led millennium committee is always looking for volunteers.

Moms often depressed

"It still doesn't cost anything for a family to get together and play baseball in the park, or go for a walk or a hike," he said. "My parents raised me that we really are responsible for our physical, emotional and economic health."

The report speaks to the problems of the depressed parent, said Burlington Councillor Linda Schreiber.

"I think we don't want to lose sight that the report is also about the mental health of the parent and getting them on track," she said.

Until they feel better, depressed parents need an extra push to get things organized for the family, said Dr. Browne.

"The mother is so depressed, she can't reach out," said Dr. Browne. "She needs someone to advocate for her."

Having been raised by a manic-depressive mother, Ms Mulvale was in support of the study.

"My sister replicated her life, my brother and I escaped it but there's a cost," she said. "Depression is a huge challenge you need to harness."

The study will wrap up in another two years.

Two new cops on Milton beat

Two new Halton Regional Police officers have been assigned to patrols in Milton.

Constables Kelly Daunter and Geraldine Defoe were recently sworn in at Halton regional council chambers.

Originally from Belleville, Constable Daunter previously worked for nine years at Ontario Hydro as a power line maintenance person and customer accounts representative.

She was active in her home community as a volunteer with the United Way.

Born in London, England, Constable Defoe came to Canada in 1976. She graduated from the University of Toronto in 1991 with a bachelor of arts degree in criminology and sociology.

Prior to joining Halton police, Constable Defoe worked as a correctional officer for more than eight years. In her spare time she enjoys playing the flute and collecting old movies.

In total, seven new constables and a constable from another police service were sworn in.
