"DON'T BE A STOP ARM VIOLATOR"

The beginning of school means the return of lunchboxes, homework and school buses busily picking up and dropping off their precious cargo - our children. People who do not stop for the school bus arm are a major problem for bus operators and a threat to the children on the bus. Although a "stop arm violator" may not be seen by the police, a bus operator is permitted to pass along a licence plate number for action by the police. For goodness sake, watch out for the kids!!

The town's best gardens were named last week during the Milton and District Horticultural Society's Biannual Garden Competition 1999 awards presentation.

Gail and Jim Pearson of 99 Mill St., who developed a mainly perennial garden over the last six years, won the urban residential award for the third time.

Ms Pearson, a horticultural society member, said she was excited by the honour, but, in fairness, doesn't think she should participate in the competition next time.

Honourable mentions in the category went to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grady of 626 Churchill Avenue, M. Waldie of 24 James St., Mr. and Mrs. Howie Collier of 750 Frobisher Blvd. and P. Korn of 646 Joyce Blvd.

Gary and Myrna Twiss of Twiss Road won the rural residential award for their garden. A special category award winner was the Milton Community Gardens on Childs Drive. An honourable mention went to Eleo Manera of Kings Court for his espalier tree.

The apartment complex at 82 Millside Dr. earned the Best High Rise Award to wrap up the residential awards.

Madison Chemical on McGeachie Drive, which sports a garden created and maintained by employees, took home the Urban Commercial Award.

The garden, which features about 100 plants, was created in conjunction with the company's recent expansion, said Madison vice-president of finance and operations Kevin Brazier.

The Rural Commercial Award went to Trafalgar Golf and Country Club.

The winners each received a plaque and a one-year membership to the Milton and District Horticultural Society. The honourable mentions received a membership.

The awards presentation was held at the Royal Canadian Legion, where the organization regularly meets.

The officer, who also paid a visit to the Tremaine Road house party and had it shut down, observed injured and intoxicated youths at the Milton Heights scene, she said.

Det. Sgt. Gordon said about 300 teens were believed to have been present at the party celebrating a youth's 18th birthday.

By about 2:30 a.m., the neighbourhood returned to its usual peaceful state, Ms Lewin said. One home was left with paint splashed on its porch door, and a rural mailbox was damaged.

No charges have been laid by police, whose staffing was pushed to the limit that night due to a major brawl involving hundreds of youths following the Acton Fair.

Ms Lewin said she was appreciative of the police handling of the incident. "I couldn't believe how quickly they managed to get everything under control. I want to say a big 'thank you.'"
