Witness calls crash sickening, senseless

By STEVE LeBLANC

The Champion

Sickening and senseless.

That's how Milton's Brian Renwick describes the fatal railway crossing accident on Thompson Road Friday.

The 44-year-old saw the early morning collision from nearby Stonehaven Farms Transport — where he's employed as a driver and was just starting the day when tragedy struck.

"They tried to run it," he said of the three young males in a sports utility vehicle, which struck the railway's crossing arm before being rammed by a freight train.

He said the barriers and lights were functional at the time. "They almost made it across but the train hit the rear left side and spun it right around. It blew me away."

Having once worked at a funeral home, the local man said seeing a dead body didn't upset him as much as the beer bottle box lying on the road — and realizing that this crash probably could have been avoided.

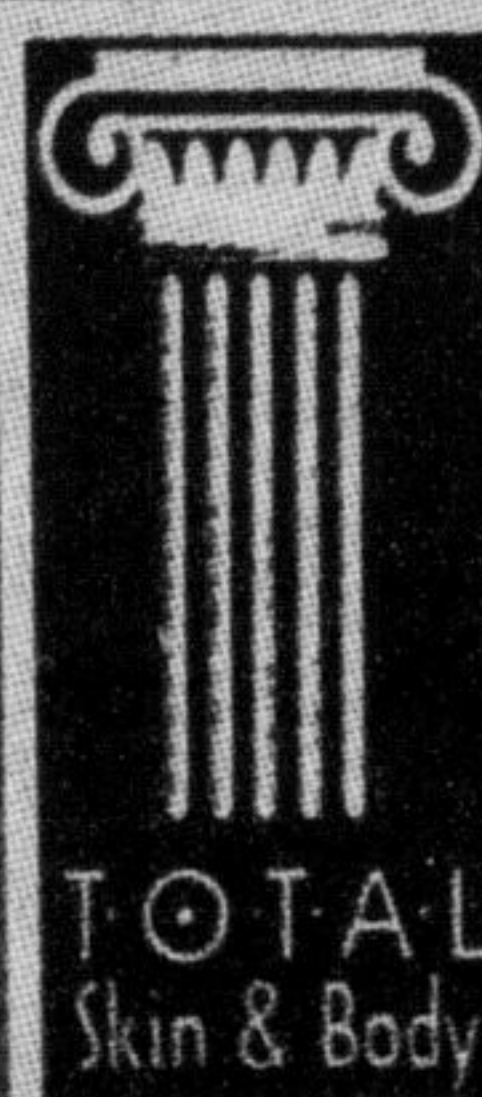

"I played it over in my mind all day. It's just totally senseless."

Mr. Renwick, the only known witness to the incident, administered aid until police and emergency crews arrived.

He couldn't do much for the trapped driver, but helped out the disoriented front seat passenger — keeping him off the road and away from his deceased friend.

"I was afraid seeing that, he might go into shock. He could walk but was pretty dazed," said the long-time Miltonian. "I just did what I could until the cops showed up, which was only a couple of minutes later."

Mr. Renwick remained on the scene for another 45 minutes and then took the day off work. "It was hard to think about anything else. It was just unreal."
