A massive growth spurt is hurtling Milton into the future but a new poster is content to bask in the past.

To that end, Heritage Milton, also known as the Local Architecture Conservation Advisory Committee (LACAC), has published a poster bent on celebrating the turn of the millennium with a nostalgic look back.

The 20 by 27-inch art poster was designed by graphic artist and LACAC member Konrad Richter along with Milton interior designer Tosca Corradetti.

Photography for the poster was snapped by local historian Judy Henderson and Mr. Richter. It features a wealth of architectural stand-outs.

"It's sort of an introductory poster showing a little bit of everything," Mr. Richter informed a special council meeting at Town Hall Monday.

"It's to show off rural, urban and architectural treasures."

Only 1,000 copies have been made of the poster, which sells for $5.

Mr. Richter himself will be found hawking the poster at the Milton Mall today, tomorrow and December 10 and 11.

"This makes a great Christmas gift to decorate a home or office," he said.

Proceeds from the poster — which is the first in a series bent on glorying in Milton's past — will go toward the purchase of a new notebook computer for LACAC.

The improved technology would allow the heritage group to record an inventory of Milton's 1,500 historic properties, complete with photographs and descriptive texts. So far, only half the properties have been inventoried electronically.
