

Poppy box thief slated to be sentenced next month

• from KING on page 1
box held approximately $200.

Earlier in the year, court heard Ms King fraudulently collected welfare from July to December.

In May, she told social services she was moving into a basement apartment on Ontario Street, and that her mother was her landlord. She had one child and was pregnant with a second due in January.

Ms King reported she was separated from her common-law spouse and they had no plans to reconcile.

She claimed she was the sole support parent and signed two documents stating that everything she said was true.

But an investigation by Halton social services found Ms King was living with her common-law spouse in an apartment in Campbellville, and she hadn't claimed the support she received.

Several upset war veterans previously attended Ms King's court appearances for the poppy box thefts, but were absent for the guilty plea Tuesday.

Ms King, who gave birth to Milton's Millennium Baby, will be sentenced April 25 in Oakville.

Teen fashions were featured during two separate shows earlier this week at Milton Mall. Organizing the events were Suzy Shier and the Next Step.
