Gifted Reding students will be among patrons at conference

Bishop Reding Secondary School will be among Halton's Catholic high schools participating in this year's 10th annual Connections Conference for Gifted and Talented Students.

Students — 25 of them from Bishop Reding — will gather Thursday at Brant Bible Church in Burlington to partake in several workshops and seminars.

The conference is considered unique as the day is entirely organized by gifted and talented students themselves for their peers.

This year, seminars will include improvisational drama, the Bronte Creek Project and a parody of the popular game show Greed.

Bishop Reding was the originator of the Connections Conference.

The event was small at first, but with increasing popularity and funding from the school board, the event grew.

"It's a great learning experience," said Kathleen Crapper, special education department head for Bishop Reding.

"The board saw it was a worthwhile cause and helped us out a lot. The students are very excited about it as well. It's all theirs."
