Business fined for violation

A Main Street business has been fined $1,500 for failing to register as an employer with the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board — a violation of the Workplace Safety and Insurance Act.

Communication Zone Inc. pleaded guilty to the charge September 11. A charge against the company's owner was withdrawn.

The act states companies must register within 10 days of employing their first part-time or full-time worker.

"People who don't file accident reports, or fail to register, are undermining the effective operation of Ontario's workplace safety and insurance system," said Linda Lamoureux, director of the WSIB's special investigations branch.

"By prosecuting these offences, the WSIB is helping to ensure a fair and effective compensation system and safe and healthy workplaces for all Ontarians."

The WSIB plays a key role in the province's occupational health and safety system by helping to prevent workplace injuries and illnesses.

To make an anonymous complain of fraud or non-compliance call 1-888-745-3237 or e-mail sileads@wsib.on.ca

People who wish to register employees can do so through the organization's website at www.wsib.on.ca or by calling toll-free at 1-800-386-0080.

Carnival this Sunday

Life is a carnival.

Especially when it's the Salvation Army's Community Carnival, which will take place this Sunday at the Milton Community Church, 100 Nipissing Rd., unit 3.

Games, prizes, entertainment and food will all be part of the fun.

The event runs from 1 to 4 p.m. For more information, call Sheldon at the Salvation Army office at 876-2420.
