

Federal candidates are off and running

Area candidates are off and running following Sunday's federal election call.

Candidates have been named for the Liberal, NDP and Green parties, while the other two parties are gearing up to select their candidates at upcoming nomination meetings.

Liberal Julian Reed, Halton's current MP, is hoping for another term in office and the NDPs chose retired school teacher Brenda Dolling of Burlington during their meeting Wednesday night.

Meanwhile, the Green Party banner will be carried by Oakville resident Tom Adams — who won the bid at a meeting Sunday. Mr. Adams is a risk management professional.

Four candidates are seeking the Canadian Alliance nomination in Halton — Clay Downes of Georgetown, Giuseppe Gori of Acton and Tim Dobson and Stan Lazarski, both of Milton.

Mr. Downes is a franchise business owner, Mr. Gori, leader of the Ontario Family Coalition Party, is a computer consultant, Mr. Dobson is manager of Ontario Power Generation's chemistry department and Mr. Lazarski is self-employed.

The Canadian Alliance candidate will be selected at a meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Milton District High School.

Last night the public got the chance to know the four candidates at a meeting at Oakville's St. Volodymyr Cultural Centre.

Brian Penman, president of the PC Riding Association of Halton said the association will nominate its candidate at a meeting in Milton tomorrow morning.

He said a number of people have shown interest in being the party's Halton candidate, but would not release names.
