HOW SOME COMMON FOOTBALL TERMS FIT INTO THE CONTEXT OF CHURCH LIFE:

For the first time in Canadian Football League history the Montreal Alouettes will face the B.C. Lions in the 88th Grey Cup Championship, to take place on Sunday, November 26 at McMahon Stadium in Calgary, Alberta. Sports fans, young and old, will cheer on their favourite players as they aspire to win this coveted championship.

As the attention of many individuals will be focused on football, I thought of how many of the technical terms surrounding that sport could be applied in a congregational experience.

A quarterback sneak is when church members attempt to leave quietly during the altar invitation.

A draw play is what many children do with their bulletin throughout the Worship Service.

Half-time refers to the interval of time between the Sunday School and the Worship Service.

A benchwarmer is someone who does not contribute to the service in any way. Sadly, this individual does not sing, pray, work, or give and is quite content to simply sit and do nothing.

Having a backfield-in-motion is what happens when younger children in the congregation begin to make frequent restroom or water fountain trips to the back of the sanctuary during the service.

Staying in the pocket is what happens to a lot of money that should be given to the Lord's work.

The two-minute warning is the point at which members of the congregation realize that the sermon is almost over and begin to gather up their personal belongings.

An instant replay is used when the pastor loses his notes and has to fall back on last week's illustrations.

Sudden death occurs when the preacher goes into overtime and is often evidenced in the attention span of congregation members.

A trap is particularly effective when the individual called on to pray for the special requests failed to pay attention as they were listed.

An end run allows people to get out of church quickly, without having to speak to anyone.

A flex defense is incorporated far too often making it difficult for individuals to personally apply the sermon's Biblical truth.

A blitz best describes the pressing rush for the restaurants that follows the closing prayer.

Hope you enjoyed those parallels! Consider visiting a local church this week and take the first step towards reaching your personal potential and brightening the future of those around you!
