

Parents to decide on dress code issue

Policy must be made by the end of June

Parents will decide if there will be dress codes and/or uniforms in Halton's public school system.

A policy on the topic will be established by the Halton District School Board by the end of June.

"The policy must provide some choice to parents at each school and we're working on it," said Education Director Dusty Papke. "Whether it's uniforms or a dress code, the decisions will involve parents at each school."

A provincial policy announced recently will require each school to respond to the dress code/uniform issue.

The board is awaiting further information from the Province about what's required, said board Chair Ethel Gardiner.

She said she believes votes may be required among parents at individual schools about whether to have uniforms.

"It's hard to find out what the whole consensus is," said the chair.

"Some people think it's a great idea and some think it's a terrible idea. It will probably be a controversial issue in a lot of school communities."

Ms Gardiner recalled a proposal to bring uniforms to Aldershot H.S. drew delegations both for and against the idea. Uniforms were not adopted at the school.
