✓ Fine feathered friends

Winged creatures like the eastern screech owl (left) is cared for at Mountsberg's Raptor Centre. Last year, the centre cared for almost 70 injured or abandoned birds of prey, rehabilitating them for release, or, in the case of those too injured or human imprinted, using them for educational purposes. Above, centre worker Marilyn Jankevicius files the talons of barn owl 'Gwen' and (below) attempts to weigh an American kestrel. Meanwhile, below right, visitors take it all in.
