

Hospital CEO is region's highest-paid public post

John Oliver earns $205,264 as CEO

Being a top hospital official in Halton continues to be a great paying job.

John Oliver, chief executive officer of Halton Healthcare Services, was the region's highest-paid public sector employee last year, earning $205,264 in salary and $8,134 in taxable benefits.

That's $17,876 more in salary, and double the taxable benefits, from 1999.

Halton Healthcare Services operates Milton District Hospital and Oakville-Trafalgar Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Oliver's salary and benefits must be disclosed along with every other public servant paid more than $100,000 under the Public Sector Salary Disclosure Act.

Since 1996, Ontario law requires provincial ministries, local governments, school boards, public sector agencies and some non-profit organizations to disclose the names and salaries of employees who earned at least $100,000 in the previous year. The amount of taxable benefits paid must also be included.

Halton Region CAO Brent Marshall earned $153,060 in salary and had $11,205 in benefits.

A total of 10 top-level regional employees made more than $100,000 last year.

Halton Police Chief Ean Algar earned $125,449 in salary and $9,220 in benefits.

Deputy Police Chief Gary Crowell and district commander Paul Cormier also made more than $100,000.

Halton District School Board Director Dusty Papke earned $138,718 in salary and $139 in taxable benefits.

Halton Roman Catholic District School Board Director Fred Sweeney earned $136,624 and $855 in taxable benefits.

There were nine district school board employees with salaries topping $100,000.

At the Catholic board, there were six.

BARBEQUE SEASON is here!

Broil King

Because of its superior design, you won't find messy lava rocks inside a Weber Gas Barbecue. Lava rocks collect grease and cause uncontrollable flare-ups.

Patented Flavorizer System replaces messy lava rocks of ordinary gas grills while virtually eliminating flare-ups. Relax and enjoy the outdoors while serving your guests and family a great meal cooked on a Weber Grill.
