Next public meeting on CN plan will be held in August

the GTA area wasn't suitable. No land will be used that's zoned by the Region. We're suggesting an access onto Britannia Road (from the terminal) but we haven't done a traffic study yet. We still have to develop an environmental assessment report for submission to the CTA (Canadian Transportation Agency). The assessment will be placed on a public registry a public consultation process will take place. The CTA will complete the Environmental Assessment screening process and then a decision will be made. We expect to submit the report in September or October."

Rita Post, a member of the Milton-based Residents Affected by Intermodal Lines (R.A.I.L.), said the land CN is proposing to build on was meant to be nothing but agricultural land.

"(The facility) will destroy the green space," she said during the question and answer period of the meeting. "This facility belongs on industrial land."

Mr. Thomson said CN looked at industrial properties in Milton but they didn't fit all the requirements that were needed.

"If it could fit, we would do it," he said, referring to the 12,000 feet of track length that's needed for the terminal. "We need to go through data gathering issues and address concerns such as noise and light over the next number of months."

Issues regarding environmental concerns will be addressed in the Environmental Assessment report, Mr. Thomson added.

"Nine million dollars was spent on the (Town's) Official Plan," one resident commented to Town staff. "How do you feel about CN coming in and ignoring the plan?"

Mel Iovio, director of planning and development for the Town said from the Town's perspective they were "surprised."

"A lot of work went into planning the community — we're disappointed. We're seeking legal advice but CN may have a right to proceed with the application (to the CTA). If we don't have a legal right in fighting the location, we're going to make sure all requirements (by CN) are met."

One resident inquired how CN is planning to enforce outside carriers to use Hwy. 407, since CN only controls 35 per cent of the trucks coming into and out of the terminal. CN is committed to moving trucks by Hwy. 407, Mr. Thomson said.

Halton MP Julian Reed told the crowd he was looking forward to the Environmental Assessment report and will be scrutinizing it closely until the Town is satisfied with the answers provided.

"Yes I am in favour of intermodal terminals, very much so," he said, which drew angry reactions from the crowd. "I'm not going to tell you what you want to hear. If this station can remove 60 million tonnes of gas (from trucks) out of the environment we've got to be giving it serious consideration. If all the efforts are put forward, it's an environmental enhancement."

"Then have it in your own backyard," one resident shouted.

Mayor Gord Krantz said the Town hasn't taken a formal position regarding the implementation of the terminal.

"I suspect the biggest majority (of Town staff) have concerns with what's proposed," he said. "If we voted on this tomorrow, it wouldn't pass Regional council."

Mr. Thomson assured the residents CN is prepared to meet all the requirements put forward by the CTA.

"Is there any way we can stop you?" was the final question of the night by a local resident.

CN's goal is to work with the community and address any concerns residents might have, Mr. Thomson said.

"We won't roll over and play dead, I assure you." Mr. Krantz said.

Regional Chair Joyce Savoline said CN should be better prepared to provide answers for future meetings. "We're in the process of understanding what this is all about. Where the authority lies, what can and can't happen. We have to continue exploring the effect on the community, the effect on the land and our ability to plan communities and feel confident that the plan means something."

The next public meeting is scheduled for August.
