Summer exchange program offers unique opportunity for students

Want a summer job that combines the opportunity to explore Canada for free and a chance to practice your French?

The Summer Work-Student Exchange is offering Halton students a unique life and job training experience that allows this and more.

The exchange will place 850 16 and 17year-old students from across Canada with jobs and host families outside their home province. Students will be paired in a way that allows them to travel to an area that uses the second of their official languages. The program runs from July 1 to August

The program offers jobs in a wide variety of non-profit organizations that will be available to students in francophone communities in either Quebec or Acadia, Nova Scotia. There's no cost to participants and the program covers travel to and from their host community.

The Summer Work-Student Exchange is an employment program offered to students who want to learn and improve their second official language.

During the program, students live with the family of their exchange partner. Students are immersed in a different language and culture, both in their new home and in their job placements.

Students are paid the minimum wage of the province they are sent to work in. All placements require students to communicate with others in their second official language on a frequent basis.

The program is under the direction of the Council of Canadian Unity and is funded by the Department of Canadian Heritage.

For more information regarding this program or to register, visit the Summer Work-Student Exchange web site at www.summer-work.com or call Lindsay Bernard, Halton co-ordinator of the exchange program, at (905) 878-1493.
